Outline Regional Goals For State Commission

MALDEN — Economic Development took top priority among 10 major objectives presented to the newly-formed State Goals Commission at a public hearing Tuesday night at the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission office.

State Representative and Speaker of the House, James Godfrey of St. Louis, was chairman. About 50 attended.

In Godfrey's opening remarks he said:

"We of the goals commission have come here tonight to find out firsthand from you what your problems and needs are. The ultimate purpose of this effort is to determine what the state government can do to assist you in the solution of your problems."

Those present were presented with the regional goals statements submitted by the Bootheel and Ozark Foothills Regional Goals Committees and given an opportunity to question or submit suggestions to the Commission. The members consisted of Godfrey, representing Gov. Warren E. Hearnes; William "Bill" Ferrell, presidnet of the Missouri State Young Democratic Clubs; Mrs. Lila Bush, representing the executive director of the Missouri Municipal League; Col. N. A. 7) natural resources by protecting water resources and wildlife, developing public sewage systems and facilities for all communities, providing environmental management and the development of natural resource research information, 8) public protection by providing an effective public relations and educating program, providing law enforcement schools, training correctional institution personnel, providing more civil defense plans, 9) recreation and open space by developing county and regional recreation areas, providing recreation for elderly, stronger litter laws, developing historical and cultural facilities.

10) transportation by providing comprehensive transportation planning, rebuilding rural road system, providing more bus service to all communities, providing traffic safety programs, and developing primary highway system.

Godfrey said all comments would be relayed by the commission to the governor and the legislature.

Diehlstadt Resignations Latest In Street Dispute

DIEHLSTADT — The resignations Monday night of Chairman Paul Norman and Trustee Grover Morrow from the Diehlstadt Village Board are the latest stemming from a controversey over the proposed opening of two streets.

City Attorney John Wilson of Sikeston resigned the day before the election of Len Allen, James Howard and Lawrence Burton to the board.

Morrow also resigned as city marshal and his two deputies Kenneth Belt and Bobby Chappell were asked to resign. Wilson, Norman, and Morr resigned because they said they could not work with the other board members.

Allen, 78, was appointed village chairman at a meeting last night. He was appointed city marshal April 17 to replace Morrow.

The board appointed Harold Preston and Ervin Thomann to fill the two vacancies.

The new board has different ideas than the old board on what the village needs and how it should be run.

The major controversey has been the proposed

Breakins At Oran School Solved

ORAN — Eight juveniles have been arrested by police and charged with breaking and entering the elementary school Friday and Saturday, Police Chief Dolph Webb said today.

Webb said the juveniles, all students at the school, were picked up Monday and the investigation was concluded last night.

Webb said at 9:30 p.m. four of the juveniles went to the school and one entered the building while the other three watched. He said that about 1 p.m. or 2 p.m. Saturday a second group of teenagers entered the building which had been left open by the first group Friday night.

Enemy Troops Attack Six Miles From Hue

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops attacked within six miles of Hue today after seizing a fire base north of the old imperial capital. Other enemy forces captured the last South Vietnamese stronghold in the northern part of coastal Binh Dinh Province.

A massive U.S. air armada of Air Force, Navy and Marine planes made hundreds of strikes against North Vietnamese positions in South Vietnam but again showed no immediate signs of turning the tide.

In the heaviest raids in more than four years, U.S. fighterbombers flew 618 strikes in all four military regions of South Vietnam, about two-thirds of them in the northernmost provinces of Quang Tri and Thua Thien in efforts to forestall an attack on Hue.

Following the debacle in Quang Tri, Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, commander in the northernmost military region 1, is being replaced.

Vietnamese marines abandoned Fire Base Nancy about 22 miles north of Hue Tuesday after a tank battle. The marines fell back to the My Chang River line, the main defensive position about 20-25 miles north of Hue.

One quarter of Hue's 200,000 population already has fled, fearing a repeat of the 1968 Tet offensive slaughter in which Communist troops seized and held most of the city for about a month and executed more than 3,000 residents.

Landing Zone English, on the central coast, crumbled after two days of savage attacks that destroyed its artillery and ammunition and inflicted heavy casualties on the south Vietnamese defenders. The several hundred remaining Saigon troops and their families withdrew under the cover of darkness and marched to the coast to ships that carried them to the provincial capital, Qui Nhon.

The fall of English, a regimental command post, completed a sweep of the province by the North Vietnamese. They took three district towns earlier. It left the North Vietnamese in control of 200,000 people, one-fifth of the population of Binh Dinh, gave them a rich rice harvest for their forces, and established a springboard for further thrusts either to the north or south.

Dowd Calls Loss Of Hoover Tragic

Edward L. Dowd, St. Louis. a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor and a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told Jaycees last night that the death of J. Edgar Hoover was a tragic loss to the FBI.

Dowd, who spoke at the Jaycee meeting at the Country Club, said "Hover was the epitome of good law enforcement and good government. He was a very human man, a very friendly man, but insisted on performance."

The St. Louis candidate told Jaycees that he is on no payroll other than a private law practice.

He called for state and criminal code reforms, noting that "we need to come up with some protection for the people." Dowd said he referred to a confessed killer being released by the Supreme Court of Missouri because of legal technicalities.

It is wrong, Dowd said, for taxpayers to pay for billboards to be moved or taken down. Even a "watered down version" of the bill to reorganize and streamline state government would save $50 million, Dowd said.

While discussing unemployment, Dowd said the state needs to make an all

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Ever since we can remember we have been hearing that times will be better in the spring.

In every state, in nearly every county, of the United States are small towns in which former business areas have become ghost streets.

The scene is a common one: store windows boarded over; former banks used for storage; dust gathering on empty benches on the sidewalks. Yet, in many of these towns there are more people than ever.

The movement of trade came about as a result of better highways, faster automobiles, and poor promotion by the local merchants. The movement has been largely from villages to county seats and other small cities which had the benefit of newspaper publicity.

But what about the future? Will superhighways, airplanes, and still faster automobiles begin to sap the commercial activity of the county seats and other flourishing small centers of trade? Not necessarily so.

The local merchant holds many advantages over distant competitors. The local consumers will remain loyal IF he thinks he will get a fair price at home. He will remain loyal IF he knows he can find the variety he seeks at home. He will remain loyal IF he realizes how much he will save in transportation and service costs by trading at home. He will remain loyal IF the local merchant demonstrates that the local store is progressive and up-to-date.

In short, every IF concerning the future of the small city merchant depends upon his use of advertising to keep the local consumer interested and informed on the ever-changing goods and services constantly being offered to the consumer by distant competitors.

The Dallas school system has taken leave of its gourd. The academic dementia seems to have begun rather quietly, as these things do. The system imported a handsome bureaucratic type from HEW in Washington to be its superintendent. Then, not too long ago, the teachers were subjected to "sensitivity training" which the system, for frightened reasons of its own, chose to call "Life Awareness." By any name, it is a mental group grope, an exercise in group or collective brainwashing which had its genesis in North Korea. The latest delusion is the "cultural awareness" session for teachers held every Friday after school. The last one we have been informed of featured a great love game where the teachers pin the name of their hero on their back. Object of the game is for Teacher One to ask another teacher to turn around, then say as many nice things as Teacher One can say about the hero whose name he or she sees. Whereupon teachers would be heavily taxed as to credulity should they, with angelic goodness in their hearts, say kind things about George Jackson, who shot a prison guard to death at San Quentin during an attempted jail break; Martin Luther King, the media-anointed saint and instrumentality of Communist radical agitation; or perhaps Gus Hall, leader of the Communist Party, U.S.A. A school system is supposed to prepare its charges for life; imagine the surprise of children when, half-grown, they find the teachers let them down and there is evil in the world, and that no amount of "niceness" will ease the pain of their social imprisonment. Moral: pick your superintendents. Very carefully.

DRY-UP JOB
ON 'WETBACKS'

Mexico has deciced to dry up the "wetback" problem. This is the flow of illegal workers across the boarder, which has long strained relations with the United States.

At the heart of the problem is the need to improve living conditions on the southern side of the Rio Grande, and among important measures being taken by the administration of President Luis Echeverria is the encouragement of American companies to build plants in the Mexican border zone.

Some 215 plants employing more than 23,000 persons are now operating in the area. This influx of foreign capital has helped increase the average income of Mexican workers by 7.5 per cent.

In addition to creating new jobs, the Mexican government is promoting more trade between the border towns on both sides. There are 14 Mexican chambers of commerce along the border, which reported $250 million in sales in 1970.

Social and cultural conditions are also improving. PRONAF — The International Frontier Program — has built libraries and Social Security offices in the area and provides counseling services to inform potential emigrants of the problems and disadvantages they face if they cross the border illegally.

Finally, in co-operation with U. S. authorities, Mexico is tracking down and arresting "coyotes" — the recruiters responsible for the wetback traffic. The Mexican Justice Department has already jailed 200 of these animals.

TIP ON CITY
CONGESTION

Operating on the theory that if you can't lick'em, join 'em — in this case motorists — the city of Montepelier, France, is testing a unique transportation system aimed at reducing urban congestion.

According to Traffic Safety magazine, the system is called "Transport Individuel Publique," or TIP, and allows drivers to travel about the city in publicly owned automobiles.

It works like this: A motorist pays a fee for an ignition key that will start any of the system's fleet of cars stationed at various locations in the city. Plastic tokens purchased at local stores allow a driver 11 miles of inner city driving on each token.

Upon reaching his destination, the driver merely drops the car off at a station for another driver to use, he may return home in another TIP car.

The operators of the system claim that one-third of all vehicles could be removed from city streets if traffic were restricted to buses, taxis and TIP cars.

ENGINEERING: STILL GOOD BET

Back in the 1960s, a good engineering graduate was like a star high school athlete - much sought by recruiters.

The recession and sharp cutbacks in federal spending, particularly in the aerospace field, have changed all this — but not changed it as much as may be supposed.

The Engineering Manpower Commission reported a 4.7 per cent unemployment rate among engineers in the summer of 1971. But a seldom reported figure is that two-thirds of these "engineers" did not have degrees in their field, points out Joseph A. Edminister, associate professor of electrical engineering at the University of Akron College of Engineering.

Furthermore, the overwhelming majority were in the aerospace electronics industry, and many of them were reluctant to break home and families ties in hard-hit aerospace centers. Unknown numbers of other engineers made shifts in employment without fanfare and without entering the statistics.

At Akron U., out of 145 engineering graduates in the class of '71, only four were unemployed by December. Average monthly starting salary was $902.

Ohio State University reported that only eight or 10 out of 519 June graduates were unemployed in November.

"The job feast in engineering is probably over," says Lilyan Bradshaw, placement director for the College of Engineering at Ohio State. "The famine never materialized, and the future looks like a comfortable balance of realism."

In other words, while there are certain to be shifts in the job market over the years, there is no question about the continuing need for engineers in the future.

According to the Public Service Company of Colorado, "Tree farming in America started in 1941 with a tract of 120,000 young trees in western Washington. Today more than 33,000 tree farmers are growing forests on over 72 million acres. Forty-five million of these acres are in the South, which expects to double its wood volume production by the year 2000. This will be accomplished by extension of sound forest management to small private ownerships, new tax incentives, and increased federal and state financial assistance for tree planting, timber stand improvement, and fire control."

Thus are our lives enlarged. They begin to count for something beyond our years. No longer do we live in the limited enclosure of our own efforts and achievements. WHAT THEY WOULD CHOOSE

According to press releases, the farmers in the heartland of the U. S. have had little to do these days, "... but watch as a virulent disease moves silently through their fields...." The disease is the corn-leaf blight that struck heavily in the Southeastern part of the U. S last year and spread into the heart of corn producing regions.

In 1970, corn blight and drought combined to wipe out 15 per cent of the nation's corn crop. A major reduction in the 1971 crop, it is said, will be felt quickly in higher prices to consumers to meat, dairy products and poultry. One authority comments, "The biggest question mark overhanging the near-term outlook for inflation does not concern the steel-wage negotiations but the progress of the corn-leaf blight."

It is interesting to conjecture whether those who have so vehemently scorned continued scientific progress -- progress that is continually finding solutions to such problems as corn blight -- would be as strong in their convictions if they were suddenly faced with the choice of getting on the side of science or starving. The day may come when they will have just such a choice.

Why don't more companies offer more information about products in their advertising?

Advertising has three basic functions in the marketing process: to acquaint consumers with a brand name or trademark, to introduce features of a product that are distinctive and to make the consumer want to buy. Many consumers are not attracted to sober, fact-filled recitals of info, so advertising expenditures would be wasted if information was the main thrust. There is some evidence that advertisers are finding it profitable to give sophisticated consumers a more product info and if consumers continue to respond to such ads, other advertisers will follow suit.

What can consumers do to help stop misleading advertising?

Advertisers write what they think will appeal to consumers. Through copy testing they measure response to various appeals. If we buy freely in response to emotionalized, exaggerated sensationalism, we'll continue to get that kind of advertising. When consumers ignore untruthful advertising, merchants cannot afford to continue it. Advertising represents a company's voice to consumers. Reputable companies know that departure from the truth undermines the public's confidence and will not waste dollars and words on such questionable pursuits.

LET SALESMEN
OWN STOCK

Twenty per cent of any given group of salesmen will always produce 80 per cent of the sales.

A good incentive-compensation scale for salesmen slides up: 5% on the first $100,000 sales; 7½% on the second $100,000 and so forth. And don't modify it if some hot salesman brings down the chandeliers and earns a fortune. That's what you wanted.

The word will go thru the sales grapevine and you won't believe the results.

Top salesmen (all salesmen if you can work it) should be given stock options and encouraged to think like owners.

A good way to kill a top salesman is to promote him to assistant sales manager. A manager is one breed, a salesman is another. Most good salesmen thrive in the field, wither at headquarters.

"There I was alone," a true salesman once said, "With nothing but my golden voice."

THOSE DIFFICULT
LETTERS

The following suggestions are offered merely as guidance.

(To the children of a father)

Dear Friends:

There is only one way to look when the day is dark, and that is forward, where the sun is shining behind the clouds. Happiness lies in meeting each day with a smile and going ahead.

The pioneer rose with the sun and labored as it crossed the heavens. And when it sank behind a western horizon he cheerfully headed home — tired but happy in the consciousness of a man's work done It is so that I like to think of Life — when a man like your dear Father is called to his reward — with a man's work done.

Sincerely,

H.L. Hunt

THERE'S STILL A WAR

Fresh communist attacks in Vietnam described as the most serious since the Tet offensive should open the eyes of the perpetual doves in the United States. It has been their liberal-slanted contention that Hanoi and the Vietcong were really not war-like after all and that they had good intentions toward the people of South Vietnam and only resented the "interference" of outsiders. But the latest aggression of the North Vietnamese is aimed squarely at the territory and armed forces of Saigon. And it should be kept in mind that these attacks are delivered in the aftermath of the China visit of President Nixon and on the eve of his projected journey to Moscow. Moscow continues to be the inspiring force behind the communists of North Vietnam and the source of their logistic strength.

Great tests are ahead for the determination of the Saigon government and its people. If they can prove their mettle by stopping the onslaught from the North, they will have inflicted a decisive blow to the aspirations of the communsit aggressors. And they will have strengthened our hand in the field of world politics. Victory by the people of South Vietnam will show that we have done a good job in equipping them for the tasks of defense and preparing them for self autonomy. The critics at home will not be silenced but a victory by our allies will diminish the basis of their arguments.

Regardless of the rantings of the liberals in the United States we must continue with some support of Saigon. Too many American men have died in combat and are being held in prison camps for us to cave in now. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — J. Edgar Hoover's intrepid sleuths, who are paid by the taxpayers to solve crimes and catch spies, spend an extra-ordinary amount of their time snooping into the private lives of movie stars, sports heroes, political figures and other public personalities.

The FBI's Los Angeles office, in particular, has kept Hoover informed on the sex habits and political activities of such film celebrities as Rock Hudson, Paul Newman, Marlon Brando, Donald Sutherland, Harry Belafonte and Zero Mostel.

The secret FBI file on actress Jane Fonda, for example, would choke a hippopotamus. She won an Oscar as best actress last month for her performance in the movie "Klute.' But to the FBI, she is a "subversive" and an "anarchist."

These are labels the FBI has used, without much evidence, to justify its costly, continuing surveillance of her.

It's quite true, as the Los Angeles office has reported darkly in a confidential document, that Miss Fonda "has been active in supporting the cause of the Black Panther Party, American Indians and servicemen."

The FBI could have found this out by reading the newspaper. For the turbulent actress hasn't been at all secretive about her political activities.

FBI IS LISTENING

"I spent a lot of time in an ivory tower, kind of up there in Beverly Hills looking through the smog down there....," she explained recently on the Dick Cavett television show. "One day, I dropped down there, and there were people and I began to find out what was happening to the masses of people."

The FBI carefully taped her remarks and placed them in her secret file. A subsequent appearance on the David Frost show was only partially taped. Explain a notation in the file:

"The remainder of the show was devoted to questions from the audience concerning the Vietnam war. The subject (Miss Fonda) did not make any inflammatory remarks, during the question and answer period."

Nevertheless, the transcript of what she said on nationwide television was classified: "Top secret. No foreign Dissenimation. No Dissemination Abroad. Controlled Dissemination. For Background Use Only."

FBI agents have also caught her act at college campuses and military bases around the world. "On September 20, 1971," states a typical entry," Special Agents of the FBI observed that Jane Fonda....appeared at the 'Jam Factory,' a privately owned night club located at 120 Villita Street, San Antonio, Texas.....

"Jane Fonda confined her role to singing and acting out skits with the troupe...." reported the FBI critics. "She spoke briefly .. on several subjects but was unable to concentrate on any particular one within a given time, rather, her speech was of a rambling nature."

The FBI thought it had hit the jackpot when Miss Fonda was arrested shortly after midnight November 3, 1970, for bringing "drugs" into the country from Canada. It turned out that the drugs were vitamin pills and barbiturates prescribed by her doctor.

FONDA'S NOTEBOOK

But she was detained by U.S. Customs at the Cleveland International Airport long enough for agents to go through her belongings. Afterward, the FBI reported gleefully that the search had produced "large quantities of revolutionary literature, including Black Panther Party and White Panther Party newspapers, underground newspapers, anti-Vietnam literature and approximately 25 tapes of unknown content.

"In addition, U.S. Customs found in Fonda's possession a handwritten notewook which contained names, addresses and telephone numbers and many revolutionary and leftist groups....

"A U.S. Customs representative advised that the literature, tapes and notebook that U.S. Customs personnel had taken from Fonda when they arrested her earlier at Cleveland International Airport would now have to be returned to her... as these items were not pertinent to the cases U.S. Customs had charged Fonda with, namely the bringing of the pills and capsules into the country....."

But the FBI reported triumphantly that "the U.S. Customs representatives made available the notebook that had been in Fonda's possession when she was arrested, and a Xerox copy of this notebook is set forth on the following pages. This notebook had several newspapers articles, an item of literature, miscellaneous notes and Fonda's itinerary tucked in the pages of this notebook, and these were also Xeroxed in the order they appeared in the notebook."

The notebook contained the addresses of such movie stars as Kirk Douglas, Paul Newman, Tony Curtis, Vincent Price and Tommy Smothers, although a few radical groups were also listed. Most of the confiscated newspaper clippings came from the New York Times.

All charges were dropped against the actress, but the FBI still has a copy of the private notebook.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — At least one in every 100 living Americans has had a stroke and survived.

I joined this growing two million-plus group a little over six weeks ago.

The one question everyone asks a stroke victim is, "What did it feel like?" Well, in my case it didn't feel like anything. Nothing.

I'm afraid it wasn't dramatic at all. There was no premonition or warning of any kind. I felt no lightning bolt of pain. Or even a twinge. No confusion. No fainting or falling down. No outcry. No paralysis or numbness.

But when the phone rang on my desk late in the afternoon of March 16, I noticed as I answered it that my voice suddenly was slurring. Having been a hypochondriac since shortly before birth, my mind instantly jumped to the right conclusion: I had had a slight stroke ... and might be in the grip of a continuing one.

"How many martinis did you have at lunch?" my friend remarked. "You sound like you had four."

"None," I told him truthfully. "You know I've been on a temperance binge since the first of the year."

After hanging up, I went out to the office washroom mirror and studied my face. I found I could wrinkle my brows and move both eyes freely. No pain. No feeling of weakness or numbness or lack of coordination in hands, legs or feet. There did seem to be a slight downward turn at the left corner of my mouth, but hardly enough to dent the winning charm of my manly dimple.

I went home and decided not to do anything until morning, which could have been a deadly decision but wasn't. When I awoke, the bathroom mirror confirmed the definite turndown at the corner of my mouth, and a short rendition aloud of the Gettysburg Address sounded like Abraham Lincoln full of martinis. But it was no worse. The stroke was over.

After going to the office and writing my daily column, I reported to the company nurse and doctor who found my blood pressure was still in the gasketblowing range—180 over 140. It should have been 130 or 140 over 80.

Three hours later, I was in a hospital next to the room in which a famous movie star several years before had been treated successfully for his occupational ailment—delirium tremens.

I spent the afternoon drawing up a new will and spent the evening—without the knowledge or consent of my doctor—drinking Irish whisky with several grieving friends. They had gathered there largely, I believe, in the hope that since it was St. Patrick's Day, I would surely reward them by making an immortal deathbed utterance. I made several, as a matter of fact, but nobody bothered to take notes.

I awoke with my first hangover of 1972, one I am beginning to suspect will be the last one of my life.

There followed 15 days of complete bed rest during which they tested everything except my I.Q.—an oversight—and took enough blood from me to give Dracula a bubble bath. Heart action okay. No diabetes. No gold stars for the liver, but blood pressure going steadily down, down, down.

Then, I had a few weeks of recuperation, which is a medical word for loafing. Last week I made a mistake.

I went to the boss and bragged that I was the only one on his staff at the moment with medical proof that he had a normal brain. This was because an encephalogram of my head taken the day before showed no rocks but only explainable routine waves.

"I didn't know we had a brain like that left in the organization," acknowledged the boss. "Do you think it would hurt it if we put it back to work for a change?"

So, one stroke and a little more than six weeks later, here I am back at the typewriter.

A few words of counsel:

For nearly 20 years I have had high blood pressure and carried up to 40 pounds too much weight, the equivalent of lugging around three bowling balls day and night. But I stupidly resisted the doctors' plea to do anything about either.

Now my blood pressure is normal and I have taken off 25 pounds with 15 yet to go.

"You have had your warning," my doctor said. "How long you live now depends pretty much on whether you learned your lesson."

The same is probably true of most of the 30 million Americans who are overweight and the 20 million who have high blood pressure, of whom 10 million are unaware they have.

Living on a sensible diet and taking two pills a day doesn't seem like too high a price to pay for doubling or tripling your chances for a longer life. An even more immediate reward: You feel better right away and have more energy with which to enjoy life.

Try it—you'll like it, or I'll give you your money back.

I would like to close by thanking many friends and readers across the country who sent me kind messages of encouragement during my illness. It is nice to return to a world in which you feel welcomed. I also am grateful to the writers who wrote substitute columns during my absence, but do wish they hadn't all been quite so clever.

HHH Wins Indiana, Leads In Ohio

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, a slim victor over Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in the Indiana Democratic primary, clung to a narrowing lead over Sen. George S. McGovern in Ohio today as the tightest 1972 primary headed toward a photo finish.

Returns from Cuyahoga County—Cleveland, where a massive primary day snarl complicated both the balloting and the counting, began to cut into the already thin Humphrey lead for the state's 38 at-large delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

In addition, the Cuyahoga County balloting faced a possible court challenge.

Even if Humphrey's statewide lead held up, McGovern was running strongly enough around the state to win a significant share of the 153 Ohio delegates.

At midmorning, with the bulk of the Cuyahoga vote yet to be tabulated and only one-third of the Hamilton County—Cincinnati—vote counted before weary election officials went home until tonight, Humphrey led for 80 delegates, including a 13,500-vote margin for the atlarge delegates, McGovern for 50.

The Cuyahoga returns, usually about 25 per cent of the state's Democratic vote total, seemed likely to settle the close contest.

Humphrey claimed the final results would show "a great victory in Ohio."

McGovern's camp, however, was equally confident. "I think we have beat him," claimed Frank Mankiewicz, the South Dakota senator's national political director. He added that the primary proved McGovern can do well in industrial areas. "We have demonstrated that Humphrey does not own the blue collar vote," Mankiewicz said.

There was one sure loser, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington. A poor fourth after 2 1/2 weeks of stumping Ohio, he said he would follow the course of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie and stop campaigning in primaries while remaining a presidential candidate.

Humphrey and McGovern centered their Ohio efforts on appeals to blue collar workers that echoed Wallace in stressing the need for tax reform. McGovern also sought to cut into Humphrey's long-time strength in black areas.

In Indiana, Wallace himself was a major issue. Humphrey fought off the Alabaman's best Northern showing ever to win 55 of the state's 76 convention delegates.

Wallace, however, picked up 21 delegates as he polled 41 per cent of the vote to 47 per cent for Humphrey and 12 per cent for Muskie.

Returns from 4,405 of the state's 4,490 precincts gave Humphrey 344,470 votes, Wallace 306,061 and Muskie 85,400.

The Alabama governor was also on his way to a home-state rout of anti-Wallace party loyalists who control the state's Democratic machinery. His backers won 10 races and led in 12 of 19 other Alabama primary contests.

In the Alabama Senate primaries, veteran Sen. John J. Sparkman led a six-candidate Democratic field while former Postmaster General Winton W. Blount led a field of four Republican hopefuls.

In the day's fourth primary, in the District of Columbia, a slate of delegates committed to Walter E. Fauntroy, the capital's elected representative in Congress, led an uncommitted slate by a 2-1 margin in a contest shunned by the presidential contenders.

President Nixon's backers swept through the four Republican primaries with little opposition.

In Ohio, Humphrey jumped into a small lead soon after the polls closed and held it through the evening as district after district reported only a few hundred votes separating him from McGovern.

Returns from 6,504 of the state's 12,648 polling places in the battle for the state's 38 at- large delegates saw Humphrey's slate leading with 217,977 votes to 203,886 for McGovern's slate.

Trailing were Muskie's slate 53,121, Jackson's 43,888 and former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy's 13,140.

Besides the 38 at- large delegates, Humphrey was leading for 42 delegates in nine congressional districts. McGovern led for 50 delegates in 10 districts.

The long count of paper ballots proceeded through the night after a primary day of unprecedented confusion that provoked a barrage of political charges between Ohio's Democratic governor and Republican secretary of state and led to a federal court suit that kept Cleveland polls open an extra 5½ hours until midnight.

The Cuyahoga County confusion began early in the day when voters found 127 polling places closed at the scheduled 6:30 a.m. EDT opening. In others, there was no electricity for the machines used in congressional and state contests.

At Humphrey's request, U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. Battisti ordered the polls open the extra 5½ hours. That sent McGovern's supporters off to the Ohio Supreme Court, demanding that the Cuyahoga County ballots be impounded and the results elsewhere in the state be kept from the public until the Cleveland polls closed.

In Columbus, Supreme Court Judge Leonard J. Stern rejected the request, saying he lacked authority.

24 Miners Killed; 77 Still Missing

KELLOGG, Idaho (AP) — At least 24 miners died in the nation's richest silver mine after fire swept through mineshafts more than half a mile underground, authorities said today.

Shoshone County Sheriff Lou Gardner said 19 bodies were being brought to the surface in addition to the five which mine officials said were removed from the murky shafts Tuesday.

More than 100 men escaped.

Families and co-workers of miners reported missing huddled over warming stoves on the surface while rescue crews sealed off shafts they had checked but found empty.

First reports said 77 miners were unaccounted for. It was not immediately clear whether the death toll of 24 cited by the sheriff included some of the 77 missing miners.

About 100 rescue personnel were charting areas sealed behind bulkheads to keep flames from spreading into new portions of the mine. The rescuers also were working their way into other smoke-filled shafts as they tried to locate the missing miners.

Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus said in Boise that state authorities will seek as soon as possible to determine the cause of what he said may be Idaho's worst mine disaster.

Some 100 members of the families of the missing men gathered at the concrete-faced mine after the fire broke out late Tuesday morning, then at the behest of mine officials started a long wait in a nearby mine warehouse.

As darkness fell, mine worklights illuminated the entrance to the shaft and a corrugated iron structure housing the mine's hoist machinery.

Mine officials would not say whether they knew the location of the missing men in the labyrinth of tunnels that extend 5,000 feet into the earth.

A Sunshine spokesman said the missing miners have no means of communicating with those above ground, and they have not been heard from since the fire started.

Six Bills Signed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill which included $10 million to pay refunds on state income tax was one of six measures signed Tuesday by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

The governor has now signed 85 bills and vetoed two for this session.

The bill also contained funds to pay state costs in replacing county funds used to distribute surplus commodity food to needy persons and funds to pay for office space rented here by state agencies.

The governor vetoed one item in the bill — $38,428 for the Federal Soldiers Home at St. James. The veto was necessary, the governor said in a statement, because the funds would be used for staff positions not recommended in his budget.

Also signed Tuesday was a bill authorizing approximately $4.5 million in state Park Board funds for land acquisition and park development.

Other bills signed would:

—Increase payments for welfare patients from $150 to $200 per month in practical nursing homes and from $110 to $150 per month in domiciliary nursing homes.

—Change methods for organizing subdistricts in soil and water conservation districts.

PSC Put On Merit System

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Tuesday said he was placing employes of the state Public Service Commission under the merit system by executive order. The order was effective immediately.

Hearnes said he was prompted to take the action because of the turnover in technical people on the PSC staff. Merit system security might help curtail the loss of needed personnel, he speculated.

No one will receive a pay increase as a result of the shift from patronage to merit system status, he pointed out.

Present employes would be required to take merit system examinations, he said, but many will have to be oral tests due to the technical nature of the work. All new employes will have to pass the test before going on the payroll.

Those exempted from the merit status will be the five commissioners appointed by the governor, their secretaries and the PSC's general counsel.

The agency is responsible for regulating public utilities and commercial transportation.

An attempt to extend the merit system by statute to the PSC and the Liquor Control Division failed in the 1971 legislative session.

But the legislature passed a bill this year to bring the Industrial Inspection Division under the merit system.

Work Makes Man Deathly Sick

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is overwhelming me. I got the idea to write to you when I saw a letter from a teen-ager who vomited every time she had to eat away from home.

My husband has had so many jobs I can't count them. When he starts he always seems happy. He's sure "this is it." Suddenly the whole thing turns sour. It's either a remark his boss made or someone he works with insulted him. Last time it was nothing specific, just a feeling that the people at the place didn't like him. He doesn't want to work there anymore.

It wouldn't be so bad if he'd just quit, but he never does it that way. He gets sick. I mean deathly ill. He vomits, runs a high fever and is so weak he can't get out of bed. Afterwards he goes to the company doctor. "Nothing wrong," the doctor says. You have a 'sensitive stomach.'" I've been reading your column long enough to know this man of mine needs counseling. When I suggest it to him he says, "You and that nutty Ann Landers think counselors are magicians. I don't need counseling, I have to work it out myself."

What can I do, Ann?---His Wife.

Dear Wife: Suggest another doctor. With a little luck he'll find one who will tell him, "Your stomach trouble originates higher up---in your head. You need counseling so you can find out why you can't function in a normal way." Perhaps your husband should be doing a different kind of work. A good therapist will explore this possibility.

Dear Ann Landers: Next week my husband and I will celebrate a big anniversary. My mother has spoiled what would have been a glorious surprise party by tipping me off. This is the fourth time she has done this and it just burns me up. I've told her each time that I'd rather not know. She insists she does it for my own good. She says, "I don't want you to get caught wearing an old dress---or maybe your hair won't look right."

It would be such fun to walk into a room just once and have people yell "SURPRISE", and have it really be a surprise. I've had to fake it three times and now I'm going to fake it again. It not only takes the fun out of it for me but I feel like such a phony baloney.

Any suggestions, Ann?---Maud The Fraud.

Dear Maude: Tell your mother that if she tips you off again you're going to call the hostess and ask her to change the date of the party because somebody blabbed. If your mother is the hostess tell HER to change the date of the party and keep her lip zipped or you won't act surprised.

Dear Ann Landers: Here it is from the horse's mouth, in case that girl from Corning won't take your word for it. I married a man with a drinking problem thinking he would change for me. (God, how he promised!)

When I think that I broke up his marriage I could die. I envy his ex-wife! How I wish I were in her shoes. His children never see him. He won't even sign the birthday cards I buy for him to send. His life consists of working and drinking. I am only 24 years old and I feel like 100. I've decided to go to an Al-Anon meeting next week and get some help for myself since he won't budge. I hope Corning listens to you. I wish I had. You told me not to marry this man.---Detroit Free Press.

Dear D.: I'm glad you're going to give Al-Anon a try. It has helped millions.

PENSION PLAN HEARINGS REVEAL NEED FOR REFORM

Last year the Senate Labor Subcommittee conducted public hearings to inquire into problems with our system of private pension plans.

During these hearings, the Subcommittee heard the testimony of numerous working people who found, when the time came for retirement, that the pension benefits they had earned and which they had been led to believe would be theirs no longer existed because of some failure in the pension plan. We also heard from the employers of the workers who testified. Through the facts obtained from these witnesses, the Subcommittee was able to identify specific weaknesses in the basic structure of the private pension system.

Common Problems

The most common problems were these:

— Inadequate vesting, that is, the failure to assure a worker that he has qualified for pension rights under a formula prescribing a specified number of years worked for the company, a particular age reached, or, as is often the case, a combination of these factors. Thus an employee working under a pension plan with no vesting rights — an extreme situation — could work for 40 years for the same employer but find he had no pension if he were laid off the day before he reached retirement age.

— Insufficient funding of assets, resulting in an employee being informed that he will receive no pension, or a reduced pension, because there simply is not enough money in the pension fund to pay all of the benefits that have been promised.

— Violations of fiduciary responsibility by those entrusted with administering, investing and safeguarding the pension fund. These violations range from trustees using the pension funds for their own benefit to instances where the assets have been dissipated because of the trustees' failure to exercise reasonable skill or care in handling the pension fund.

— Laxity in enforcing the patchwork of laws we now have regarding pension funds, thus allowing abuses and illegal practices to continue without being questioned by responsible authorities.

— Failure to inform workers of the details of their pension rights, leaving them in the dark as to what is required of them in order to qualify for retirement benefits and what those benefits are going to be.

Below The Minimum

Additional studies were conducted by the Subcommittee of more than 1,400 pension plans which were selected as illustrations of typical plans covering a wide variety of business situations.

We found that the median retirement benefit from private pensions was only $99 per month. Significantly, this amount, when added to the median Social Security benefit of $129 per month, leaves a total of $228 a month — $13 less than the minimum monthly income required to sustain a retired urban couple, as determined by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

This recital of problems is not intended to be a catalogue of horror stories — indeed, the nation's private pension system is strong and vital.

It has experienced extraordinary growth in recent years — going in assets from $12 billion in 1950 to $130 billion in 1970, and in workers covered from 9.8 million in 1950 to over 30 million today. These startling figures attest to the system's important role.

Nor can the problems in the pension system be traced to any one group. Business, labor, government — all have responsibilities in this area — and all have failed to meet them in one way or another.

But the fact remains that millions of American workers are dependent for the economic security of their retirement years on pension plans that are themselves too insecure to hold any realistic prospect of keeping that promise. And as Chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Aging, I have seen over and over again the sad consequences of old age without an adequate retirement income.

This week in St. Louis I held the first of a series of investigative hearings — to be held in various parts of the country — which will focus on problems that arise when a pension plan is suddenly terminated.

It explored these questions: What happens when a plant or business shuts down or is relocated? What is the effect on pension rights if the pension plan is tied directly to employment at that plant? Even if workers have vested rights, is there enough money in the pension fund to pay the vested benefits? And what about those who have already retired — can their pensions continue to be paid at the full amount? In a later column I will discuss some of the answers we were given.

This is an area that the Subcommittee had not investigated in depth heretofore.

Stoddard Court Okays Drawing Of Jail Plans

BLOOMFIELD — The Stoddard County Court has given the green light to a Dexter engineering firm to draw up plans and make specifications for renovation and updating of the existing county jail facilities.

Since October 1971 the court has been studying existing conditions at the jail and considering methods, ways and means of providing the county with new and modern jail facilities.

Under a plan which the court chose earlier the existing jail facilities will be remodeled and enlarged. The living quarters now occupied by Sheriff Edsel Edwards, his wife and son in the front part of the building will be incorporated into the jail proper and used for additional cells and facilities.

If the county court approves plans and specifications submitted by C. R. Trotter and Associates, a Dexter engineering firm, actual building of the facility will be open to bids. The court hopes to have a suitable bid and be ready to proceed with the plan in a few weeks.

At the request of the County Court and County Clerk John M. Capps, a group of representatives from the U.S. Bureau of Prisons — Bill E. Duncan, assistant director chief of correction programs, and Walter Lumpkin and Wayne Potter, law enforcement assistance administrators — came to the county in October 1971 to inspect the jail facilities.

Duncan returned to Bloomfield in February to give technical assistance and make his recommendations. He submitted a set of recommendations to Robert Henzi, executive director for Region 6 of the Law Enforcement Assistance Council.

The County Court then directed a preliminary report on the jail to be made by Trotter and Assocites. The brochure compiled by the firm dealt with existing facilities and conditions, jail improvements, alternatives, cost estimates, conclusions and recommendations, and general layouts of building plans.

Three courses of action were proposed for consideration:

* Remodeling existing facilities.

* Building an addition to existing facilities.

* Building a new jail.

At the last meeting of the County Court, the first plan was chosen as being the least expensive and most practical at this time.

SeMo State Schedules CLEP Tests

A fourth test session of the College Level Examination Program will be held May 13 in Cape Girardeau.

Persons interested in registering to take one or more of the examinations, should contact Gene Haenni, University of Missouri Extension Division Office, SeMo State College, 334-8144, or their local extension center.

CLEP enables adults to obtain college credit by examination. Ninety persons have participated in three previous testing sessions in Cape Girardeau.

CLEP also provides persons with a means of gauging their intellectual achievement.

SeMo State College grants up to 15 hours of CLEP credit. Hundreds of colleges and universities in the United States presently grant credit for satisfactory performance on CLEP examinations.

Test performance of Missouri adults that have participated in CLEP has shown that an adult has at least a 50-50 chance of qualifying for some college credit.

The educational background of program participants, both nationally and locally, has been varied, ranging from some college experience to completion of the eighth grade.

CLEP tests are of two kinds, general and subject matter. The general examinations cover five basic liberal arts subject areas ... English, humanities, social science, natural science, and mathematics. Fee for two to five parts of the battery of five general examinations is $25. Fee for one general examination is $15. Subject matter examinations are also $15 per examination. Twenty-seven subject matter examinations are offered.

Tourists Praise Patrol

JEFFERSON CITY — The Missouri highway patrol is a big factor in making Missouri an outstanding tourist state, according to James L. Pasley, director of the Missouri Tourism Commission. "We receive nothing but praise from tourists concerning our great state troopers," said Pasley.

The highway patrol rendered a total of 37,330 services to the motoring public last year on the Interstate highways of Missouri. Included in the total was aid given to 11,909 drivers encountering mechanical problems, 9,040 aids rendered to motorists out of gasoline, 8,986 services due to tire failure, services given to 162 vehicles on fire and 614 miscellaneous services.

Interstate 70 between St. Louis and Kansas City and Interstate 44 between St. Louis and just west of Joplin had the most traffic and kept the patrol the busiest.

"This year, a record number of tourists will visit Missouri," Pasley noted. "The valuable aid given by the courteous troopers of the Highway Patrol is vital to continuing the state's successful tourist program."

Analysis Of Ad Impact Sought

The writer is a master's degree candidate in the University of Missouri Washington reporting program.

By RITA BOHRER

WASHINGTON -- Advertising has stood accused of pushing a drug culture, perverting moral values and making children snack- happy instead of nutrition- conscious.

Some proclaim its innocence, some proclaim its guilt, but no one -- not the lawmaker responsible for regulating advertising, not the writer responsible for creating it -- knows for certain its impact on the consumer.

Much of the basic research remains undone.

This is the argument behind a little- noticed bill that would create a National Institute of Advertising, Marketing and Society.

Sen. Frank Moss (D-Utah) introduced it after his consumers subcommittee found itself "frustrated by a lack of a basic scientific literature accurately describing the psychosocial impact of advertising."

"Put in another way," he told his colleagues, "we are approaching the end of the twentieth century kneedeep in a marketing economy and a consumer culture which we barely comprehend. To the child growing up in America, marketing messages are as pervasive as the air he breathes."

As a matter of fact, today's consumer is confronted with from 500 to 1,500 advertising messages ever day, according to testimony by the associate director of Consumers Union.

The investigation of the subtle, long- term effects of this bombardment will hopefully be as scientifically objective as possible.

As now proposed, the institute would become part of the National Science Foundation and, as NSF has always done, it would fund studies by private and academic researchers rather than carry out its own experiments.

The director, appointed by the president, would be responsible for charging a comprehensive program of research aimed at answering the basic questions about advertising's impact.

Other government agencies and also the institute's own advisory council will also be able to suggest specific studies.

That advisory council would be appointed by the director, with 12 members chosen from business, consumer groups, labor, the academic community and other interested segments of society.

Its main goal will be to help government govern intelligently in matters concerning advertising. Its expert testimony could always be requested by a regulatory agency or congressional committee.

And, if the economic and behavioral research turns up answers that would help the consuming public, the institute would publicize them.

As Moss said, "The institute would have no regulatory powers, but it is envisioned that industry, government and the public at large would make full use of the knowledge developed by the institute to better American life."

The highly specialized research would be powered with an annual budget of $5 million (compared to the $19,565 billion spent on advertising retail goods and services in 1969).

After hearings last October, Moss dropped many provisions of the original bill, which, according to critics, seemed to take advertising's "guilt" for granted.

Also, the institute would not, as first planned, be a part of the regulatory Federal Trade Commission, and it woul not be empowered to intervene, unasked, into the decision - making processes of other agencies, as in the original bill.

Edward Merlis, professional staff member of the Commerce Committee, said in an interview that the more stringent objectivity and the new expertise on the council would gain support for the bill in the Seante.

A vote is not scheduled yet, but there will be further hearings on the proposed institute later in May.

Senator Asks Funds To Fight Pollution

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo) urged an increase in funding for water and waste disposal programs, the Rural Environmental Assistance Program and the Soil Conservation Service, expressing concern over reduction in the Administration fiscal year 1973 budget requests for agriculture programs to control pollution.

Appearing before a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, the Senator noted that the Administration's Agriculture Department budget request for conservation and environmental protection programs is $178.5 million below that appropriated for fiscal year 1972.

"All too often soil erosion clogs our streams and kills our wildlife. Feeding yards and processing of raw agricultural products create serious waste disposal and water pollution problems on which farm operators need technical and financial help. Unchecked run-off brings flooding."

"We in Missouri are deeply concerned about these problems. Not only do they damage our natural resources and impede crop and livestock production, but they also inhibit the economic development of rural areas which cover such a large portion of our state and are so important to its welfare. The smaller cities, towns and people of agriculture need more Federal help, not less, in meeting pollution control problems."

Symington noted that Missouri continues to be one of the country's largest areas in need of water and waste disposal programs, at the same time pointing out the Administration's proposed decrease of $100 million in the national budget for these programs. Missouri already has a backlog of active applications filed with the Farmers Home Administration, and an increase in the number of applications from the State is expected next year.

The Administration request fo r the Rural Environmental Assistance Program totals $140 million, a reduction of $55.5 million below las year's appropriation, and a $2.3 million cut for Missouri.

"A reduced appropriation can only discourage REAP projects by farmers who would otherwise be able to accelerate practices to prevent gulley-creating run- off, continued soil erosion and flooding," the Senator said.

In regard to the Soil Conservation Service, Symington noted that any reduction oin appropriations "would make difficult, if not impossible, the needed extension of services in any state during Fiscal year 1973."

The Senator urged the subcommittee to consider an alternative Agriculture Department budget propsed by the National Association of Conservation Districts, which would include a request of $348.6 million for the Soil Conservation Service, representing a $29 million increase over the Administration request and a $6 million increase above last year's appropriation. Such an increase could have great impact on Missouri, making possible the approval of five new soil and water conservation districts and the Green Hills Resource Conservation Project planning application. Construction on the Clarence Cannon Memorial Watershed could also begin under the NACD budget recommendations.

"Uncontrolled pollution creates losses for the farmer and the nation," Symington remarked. "If we are truly concerned about protecting our environment, we must provide adequate funds for these authorized programs."

Bicyclists Need To Obey Rules

CHICAGO -- Only a stronger emphasis on traffic safety will help prevent bicycle deaths and bicycle- related accidents in the United States this spring and summer, says the National Safety Council.

Last year, 850 bicycle riders died in traffic accidents ithe United States. Another 39,000 bicyclists were injured ir motor vehicle= related accidents.

You can avoid being a bicycle- accident statistic by knowing and abiding by all safety rules.

Drive on the right side of the street, in the same direction as traffic. Obey all traffic signs and signals, using both hands to guide the bicycle except when signaling the intention to stop or turn. Carry all books or packages in an attached basket or carrier.

Never "hitch a ride' from another vehicle. Always ride single file, keeping a safe distance from the vehicle ahead. Be aware of other vehicles entering at intersections as well as parked car doors being opened in your path.

Only one person should ride a bike, unless it is a tandem model or an adult bike with a special baby seat.

On entering traffic, always stop to look for other vehicles and pedestrians, allowing them the right -of - aa Walk the bicycle across busy intersections and all railroad crossings. When you make a left turn at busy intersections, walk the bike across the two streets and enter traffic again on the right side.

Watch out for slippery surfaces such as sand, gravel, or dirt collected along curbs. These may cause wheels to slip when turning or stopping.

When riding in specially designated play areas, look out for children playing. Holes, rocks, and low hanging branches are all potential hazards.

What size bike should you ride? The general rule is that the bicycle should fit the driver. That is, when seated on the bike, the ball of your foot should be able to touch the ground without stretching your leg or leaning the bike to one side.

Equip your bike with a horn or bell that can be heard 100 feet away; a front light visible from 500 feet; and a red rear reflector visible from 300 feet.

Learn the various parts of your bicycle and check to make sure they are in good working order. Have brakes and gear systems repaired only by trained bicycle mechanics.

The National Safety council hopes every bicycle rider is aware of the responsibilities in traffic. Hopefully, this knowledge will result in fewer accidents, deaths and injuries this summer.

Bold Move Asked For Schools

JEFFERSON CITY -- Missouri's new committee studying the future financing of public schools was urged Tuesday to make another ',bold move" on behalf of the state's school children.

"Bold moves aren't uncommon in Missouri," said Arthur L. Mallory, state commissioner of education. "Missourians have been making these moves for education since our state was founded, when it was first decided that education should be offered all the people.

"We're aware that the program we're now offering is not perfect," Mallory continued. "We know that we don't have equal eduational opportunity in this state, not for those with special needs, or for many who're in need of vocational training.

"We also know that the day is long past when an eighth grade education was sufficient. In fact, we're rapidly approaching the point where education will be constant, a life-long process of school and training, more school and re-training. Change is constant and the skills and techniques we're learning today may be completely outdated ten years from now."

Commissioner Mallory spoke at the first working session of the study committee in Jefferson City. The statewide group is composed of 106 Missourians, representing many areas of interest. their purpose is to make an intensive study of the future needs of the state's school children, determine how to pay for that program, and establish ways of equalizing educational opportunities.

Current plans are for the committee's report and recommendations to be submitted to the State Board of Education this Fall. The Board, in turn, then would make recommendations to Missouri's General Assembly, hopefully by December.

In announcing the study, Mallory called in "the single most important thing we're now doing" and said there is a great, growing sense of urgency among public school educators all across Missouri.

Looming ilarge in the background and contributing to that urgency are several recent court decisions declaring that property- tax financing of schools is not fair and euqal. Decisions to this effect have been made in five states and one of the cases, involving Texas, has been appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court. Another important court decision involved special education. In that case, the State of Pennsylvania was given only 90 days to equalize its program of special education.

In Missouri, the future is further clouded by the fact that the coming school year is the last of a four- year commitment by the General Assembly to provide an increase of $35 million per year in state aid to the local school districts.

Missouri now has 619 public school districts with 1,084,682 students enrolled.

"Of course, we're concerned about these court decisions," Commissioner Mallory said. "We're also concerned about our current programs and how we're going to pay for them. But the thing we're most concerned about -- and the most important thing we're going to study and evaluate-- is the quality of the education we'll provide our young people."

This same concern for quality was expressed by Dr. Loran G. Townsend, dean emeritus of the School of Education, University of Missouri, Columbia, and a co-director of the Committee.

"One of the reasons I'm pleased to serve on this Committee," Dr. Townsend said, "is that we'll not be involved with a shuffling around of dollars. We will be concerned with the quality of education."

Dr. Townsend told the group that he isn't pessimistic about the future of education in Missouri, but added there can be no question that the quality of educatin offered in the state is uneven, varying from district to district.

Regarding the Committee's approach to the study, Dr. Townsend added, "It's just as important that we know when to discard an old idea as it is to know when to pick up a new one."

Tuesday afternoon, the committee's our major subcommittees began their first working sessions. Each subcommittee is responsible for a major area of investigation. These study areas are: Sources of funds; the distribution of funds; the educational programs the schools should have; and the organizational structure of the public schools, including the organization within a district.

Harry Truman Once Again Popular Man

INDEPENDENCE -- Former President Harry S. Truman will be 88 May 8.

In his 88th year of life and his 20th year of retirement, Harry S. Truman is once again a popular man. The politicians have rediscovered him. Democrats running for President can't seem to find enough nice things to say.

Sen.Henry M. Jackson of Washington promised audiences that he would "give 'em hell" the way Truman did. He recalled that it was Truman who showed the world what an underdog can do. Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty said he would "go over the heads of obstructionist politicians and appeal directly to the people as Harry Truman did."

In the former President's home state of Missouri, a candidate for governor tells voters that his new wife inspires him the way Bess inspired Harry in the White House. There is some irony in all this.

Harry Truman left office with the lowest popularity rating in presidential history and to Republican shouts of "communism, corruption and Korea," The President's name was entered in theNew Hampshire presidential primary of 1952, and Estes Kefauver beat him decisively. Soon after that, he announced he would not seek a second term.

It is not Truman the President that the presidential aspirants of 1972 are rushing to emulate, but Truman the candidate. The one who in 1948 sent Tom Dewey home to Albany after his aides had already made reservations for the inaugural ball. The election upset embarrassed the pollsters so badly it took the profession years to recover.

Truman traveled 31,700 miles and gave 356 speeches, most of them from the caboose of a train. He found a villain in the Republican Congress, "that do- nothing, good- for- nothing 80th Congress, that broke the backs of the farmer and the working man." There were no computers, no high- priced private consultants. Truman knew what he wanted to say.

He alled the Republicans a bunch of "Wall Street reactionaries" and "gluttons of privilege." He poked fun at his mustachioed, patrician opponent for refusing to slug it out with him. "Dewey is having such a high- level tea party with the voters," said Truman, "that he is horrified when anyone mentions the facts of life."

Dewey responded to all this by telling voters that "we need a rudder to our ship of state and we need a firm hand on the tiller." On election night President Truman had a Turkish bath, ate a ham sandwich, and went to sleep. If he was nervous, he didn't show it.

The full term to which Truman was elected that day was contentious. His party's platform, described by the Americans for Democratic Action as "the most liberal ever adopted by a major political party in the United States," fared poorly even in the new Democratic-controlled Congress. There was no national health insurance, no federal aid to education, no repeal of the Taft- Hartley Act. By 1950, the nation was involved in the Korean War.

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) was persuading people that Communists had infiltrated the highest levels of the U.S. government. Much of that history has been forgotten today. What politicians do remember, in a year when populaism has become the talisman, is that Harry S. Truman was the last President whose style even remotely fit the earthy image of populism in action.

Amtrack Represents Wave Of Future

By Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON -- Tha National Railroad Passenger Corp. begins its second year of operating the nation's rail passenger service Monday.

The high hopes that accompanied the debut of Amtrak a year ago have long since faded. Created by Congress to make rail travel pleasant and profitable again, Amtrak proceeded to eliminate more than half of all existing passenger trains. The remaining service, it was thought, would pay its own way by atrracting passengers from the discontinued runs.

It hasn't worked out that way. The only money- making routes in the Amtrak network are New York- Washington and New York -Boston. For the fiscal year ending June 30, the quasi- governmental corporation figures to lose around $155 million. Accordingly, the House on March 15 authorized $170 million in appropriations to tide Amtrak over until July 1, 1973. A similar measure approved by the Seante Commerce Committee on April 19 would give Amtrak $272 million.

Futher reductions in passenger rail service are likely 15 months from now. Under the terms of the Rail passenger Service Act of 1970, "Any train or trains in the basic system in whole or in part[that] are not required by the public convenience and nexessity, or [that] will impair the ability of the corporation to adequately provide other services ... may be discontinued" after July 1, 1973.

The success of the New York - Washington Metroliner, Amtrak's most reliable money-maker, would be difficult to duplicate in most other parts of the country. The Metroliner's two- hour, 59-minute travel time compares favorably with motor vehicle or air travel time between the two cities. Moreover, the Metroliners are equipped with the only long- distance rail passenger cars built in the United States since the early 1960s.

Long- haul passenger trains may be beyond rescue. Brenton Welling, Business Week's transportation editor, traveled from Chicago to Seattle on the Empire Builder and reported that only 87 of 261 passenber spaces were occupied. The crew numbered 72, and the train reached Seattle six hours late.

Few businessmen have the time or the inclination to travel great distances by train in the jet age. Welling found that his fellow passengers consisted mainly of the elderly, the railroad buffs, the poor, and present or retired railroad employees traveling on passes.

Harold L. Graham, director of Amtrak's advertising program, nevertheless believes that long- distance rail travel has a future. He sees a vast, untapped market of Europeans and Japanese who would fly to the United States on low-priced excursion tours and then travel around the country by train.

Eventually, Amtrak may have to assume direct operation of passenger trains itself. Under the present system, the railroads continue to provide crews, tracks, signals and communications on a contract basis. The contracts stipulate that Amtrak will pay the costs of these services, plus 5 per cent as a fee and 4 per cent for liability insurance. Critics of this arrangement suspect that some railroads have yielded to the temptation to pad their bills.

Succeed or fail, Amtrak may represent the wave of the future of railroad operation. The troubles of the Penn Central and other carriers have led to speculation that nationalization of the rails is inevitable. It is a step that almost no one favors, but continued mismanagement of one of the country's vigal transportation resources may leave no other choice.

Silent Alarm Nips School Violence

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Ultrasonic technology is helping a public high school overcome racial violence and vandalism.

Using a grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and John F. Kennedy High School has developed a system which silently summons help to any part of the 44-acre campus whenever an emergency or trouble threatens.

Each teacher, administrator and employe is equipped with a pencil-sized ultrasonic transmitter. When triggered it lights a bulb on a large map of the school in the principal's office and also sounds a small horn, alerting the office.

Principal Frank Schimandle says help can be on the scene within 30 seconds. Two parents, hired to walk the school corridors with walkie-talkes, are often the first to arrive.

Schimandle, who assumed his post after a heart attack felled his predecessor in the middle of a student riot, said in an interview Thursday he believes the system has nipped in the bud several potentially major incidents.

Racial incidents in schools usually stem from some dispute between two students which only becomes racial when other students take sides, the principal said. By getting teachers and other staffers on the scene while the incident is still small, he said, bigger trouble is avoided.

Kennedy High's 1,800 students are 15 per cent black, 13 per cent Oriental, 2 per cent Mexican-American and 20 per cent other whites.

The price for such a system is about $15,000 for equipment plus $6,000 for installation, Schimandle reported.

Paragould Man Held In Murder

HARTVILLE, Mo. (AP) — A 28-year-old Paragould, Ark., man was held in Wright County jail here today on murder charges in the slaying of Mansfield City Marshal Homer Fry last May.

Fry was shot to death after interrupting a burglary in the Mansfield business district last May 11. Earlier this week St. Louis police arrested a car wash employe, Donald Tuberville, who was named in a first degree murder warrant from Wright County.

Sheriff Rex Kelly picked up Tuberville Thursday and returned him to Hartville. Tuberville was the only remaining person still sought in connection with the Fry slaying.

Another man sought in the case, Marvin Grissom, McDougal, Ark., was killed last fall in a gun battle with FBI agents in Georgia. Two others, Roger and Jackie Smith of Knobel, Ark., are held in Illinois in connection with the case and are fighting extradition.

The flag that flew over Ft. McHenry when the national anthem was written is preserved in the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. It has 15 stars, for the original 13 states plus Kentucky and Vermont.

MAN-KNIT—If you can knit a simple garter stitch, you can make this handsome sweater. Black and white cotton rug yarn is knitted into four rectangles which are then sewed together to form a sweater. It's so easy even a man can do it, says our woman's editor.

out effort to bring in new industry. He noted that 3.4 million are unemployed in the state and unemployment in rural Missouri is increasing, forcing many to move to the cities.

He charged that there is a strong feeling in Missouri against machine politics. The voters are counting on people in state government who aren't interested in the policy of "you scratch my back, I'll scratch yours," he said. "They want leaders interested in the best kind of government, mental retardation, education and who will spend the tax money to the best advantage for all.

raise across the board. Martin said in the event the council did pass a city sales tax he would recommend going with LAGERS.

Mayor Charles Williams appointed Dr. Lowell Nicholson, Dr. T.P. Fenton and Sam Story to liquor commisssion. Wyman Beasley was appointed to the city planning commission.

Martin reported the city had been asked to host a Babe Ruth baseball tournament this summer and said the park would need bleachers installed. The council declined to erect the bleachers.

A bid for an insecticide was accepted from Riverside Chemical Company at $22 per gallon. Sherwin Williams Company's bid for yellow traffic paint at $2.70 per gallon and white traffic paint for $2.60 per gallon was accepted.

City Attorney W. Clifton Banta, Sr., was instructed to draw up an ordinance calling for a city election on the sale of liquor by the drink. The council was petitioned for the sales by more than 20 per cent of the voters in the last election.

Action on this ordinance will be taken at the meeting next Tuesday.

Telephone Progress Related

Dave Hargis, public relations supervisor for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, St. Louis, told about the advances made by the company at the Kiwanis Club meeting Tuesday at the Ramada Inn.

Hargis talked on the role of chemistry in the telephone industry and how chemistry has helped produce better equipment and service.

By using chemistry the telephone company was able to come up with an insulator, plastic polyethelene, to protect underground cable, Hargis said. When the cable is buried there are three things to worry about, contractors, water and gophers.

Hargis demonstrated a laser light that will be able to take care of 900,000,000 telephone calls at one time. Also demonstrated was a telephone that will not have to be dialed. The person making the call talks into the telephone and tells the number he wants to reach.

Hargis also demonstrated how this same telephone can be used to turn on the lights in a house by speaking to it.

Clyde Hankins of Wellsville was a visiting Kiwanian. Other guests were Kris, Kent and Kurt Turnbull. Robert Turnbull was in charge of the program.

opening of Swank and Martin streets to highway 77. One of them, Swank Street, would cut through property that newly elected trustees Burton and Howard have been using for years. Howard has a garage in the middle of the street.

The reason for opening the streets, according to Norman, is to facilitate the movement of traffic through town. Most streets in Diehlstadt are dead ends, and getting on highway 77 would be easier if the streets were opened, Norman said.

Burton says the old board wanted to open the streets "for spite." It was a way of getting back at people who didn't like what was being done, Burton said.

A home owned by Glen Perkins juts out over the other street the board wanted opened. The old board offered Perkins 25 feet of land by his house so he wouldn't need to tear it down, in exchange for property across the street. Perkins never replied to the board.

Burton says the majority of the people don't want the streets opened. He said the present board was elected by 75 to 80 per cent of the voters.

Norman disagrees. He says a majority of the people want the streets opened.

He says a petition the group has proporting to show two-thirds of the property owners wanting the streets to remain closed is not valid. He says 32 of the signers are using parts of town streets and alleys as their own property. He also says some of the people who signed later told him they didn't understand the meaning of the petition.

He says, in effect, the group opposed to opening the streets is trying to claim squatters' rights. He says they expect the village to give them the right to use the streets as their own property.

"I want to see it (Swank Street) opened," he said. "They say we can't open it. I'm going to see."

Whether Norman or the opposition wins probably will be decided by the courts.

The new board does not see any reason why the village needs a city attorney.

Without an attorney, the village lacks the legal power to enforce its laws, something that could come back to haunt the board in the future.

Burton has reportedly said the village board should be disbanded and that the county court should run the town.

While he does not confirm or deny the statement, he does say the previous board was trying to run the town of 160 people like a city.

For instance, he says the town doesn't need auto stickers. The money was supposed to go into a fund for building a town hall, he said, but was used instead to pay for the city attorney.

"A town this size doesn't need what was being forced upon it," he said.

Vida Blue

Blue Signs

BOSTON (AP) — Vida Blue is back in uniform, a borrowed one, with the Oakland A's, but American League rivals won't have to worry about him for awhile.

The 22-year-old southpaw ended his long holdout by signing a 1972 contract for $63,000 Tuesday, then worked out with the A's before a scheduled game with the Boston Red Sox was postponed by rain and severe cold.

Blue put his signature on the contract during a 15-minute meeting with A's owner Charlie Finley, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and l eagu president Joe Cronin.

He was nearly 1 1/2 hours late for the meeting in the league office, but Kuhn, Cronin and Finley waited patiently. It seems that Blue just slept a little late, beyond the 11 a.m. meeting time.

"I'm signed, I'm happy, I'm ready to play," Blue said. "I think the team has a uniform for me, but I don't know."

"We have one," Finley assured him.

The A's had a uniform with them on the trip—one that belonged to pitcher Jim Roland, recently sent to New York Yankees.

Blue met with Oakland Manager Dick Williams and pitching coach Bill Posedel and later threw lightly in the bullpen. He said his conditioning has been limited to running during the holdout and it may be three to four weeks before he's ready to pitch.

The young left-hander compiled a 24-8 record while winning the league's most valuable player and Cy Young awards in his first full season in the majors.

Kuhn announced that Blue's contract provides $50,000 salary, a $5,000 bonus for 1971 and $8,000 "for any possible liability under a contingent four-year college scholarship" which was part of Blue's original bonus arrangement when he signed in 1967.

Hart Tames Panthers

HAYTI — Larry Hart allowed five scattered hits and three runs in pitching the Gideon Bulldogs past the Lilbourn Panthers, 10-3, and into the finals of the sub-district baseball tournament Tuesday afternoon.

Gideon will meet the Hayti Indians in the championship game Wednesday with the winner advancing to the district tournament.

Grant Dambach started on the mound for the Panthers and was the victim of the gopher ball. The Bulldogs hit three roundtrippers in the game to account for six of the four runs Lilbourn scored. Dambach took the less but was relieved by Pat McClarty in the fifth.

Lilbourn jumped out in front with a single run in the third inning but the Bulldogs scored four runs in the same frame with one of the runs coming on a home run by Dewayne Nowlin.

Lilbourn crossed the plate again in the fifth and trailed by only two when the Bulldogs came up. Gideon collected seven hits and scored six times as Herman Huckabee hit a three run homer and Arnold Bell smacked a two run clout.

Lilbourn scored its third run in the seventh. McClarty and Allen swatted two hits apiece for the Panthers.

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The Poplar Bluff Mules' golf squad was victorious in varsity golf action Tuesday afternoon as they slipped past Cape Girardeau Central with a low score of 168 to a 170 for the Tigers.

Cape Central's Mike Edwards set the low mark for the Tigers with his 41. Mark McQuary shot a 42. Rick Winschel was next with a 43, and Woody Callicutt shot a 44.

In the junior varsity match the Tigers retaliated by defeating Poplar Bluff, 166-192.

Cape Central Upset, 3-2

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Jackson and Notre Dame high school baseball teams pulled the big upsets in the sub-district baseball tournament Tuesday when they toppled Cape Girardeau Central and Fredericktown. Notre Dame won 5-3 and Jackson took a 3-2 decision.

Good defense and key hitting provided the winners with victory while the losers were victims of errors and spotty pitching.

Terry Bazzell baffled the power hitting lineup of the Central Tigers with his variety of pitches from the left side, allowing six hits, four walks and striking out nine.

Wild pitches opened the door for the Indian victory. Back to back miscues by the pitching in the Jackson fifth allowed the Tribe to tie the score at 2-2 after the Bengals had taken a 2-0 lead in the fourth. Another pair of wild throws in the eighth allowed the winning run to cross home plate.

Roy Birk, working the eighth inning in relief got credit for the defeat after Randy Johnson worked the first seven frames with 13 strikeouts and three safeties.

Notre Dame picked up only four hits off the Blackcats' Steve Kammerman, but used the squeeze play to perfection and took advantage of seven walks to topple the 6-foot-6 hurler and his teammates.

Don Beussink scattered seven hits to the highly favored Cats while walking only two and fanning three.

Coach Jim Glasstetters Bulldogs moved their record to 4-5 for the season.

The Bulldogs opened the game with a pair of runs, taking advantage of early game Blackcat miscues and did the same in the fourth when they rounded out their scoring with three runs. Fredericktown added one run in the second with three runs. Fredericktown added one run in the second and a pair in the fourth and fell prey to tough defensive work by the NDHS diamond crew.

Jackson and Notre Dame meet Thursday at Capaha Park for the sub-district title and a right to move to Chaffee next week for a district battle.

Littell Unbeaten

Mark Littell, righthanded pitcher from Gideon who signed a professional baseball contract with the Kansas City Royals last summer, continued his fine play in the Royals' farm system.

The hard throwing youngster fashioned a two-hitter earlier this week against the Wisconsin Rapids Twins for his second win of the season against no defeats, 8-2. He struck out 13 batters.

Littell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Littell of rural Gideon.

NEW YORK (AP) - The management of the financially troubled Memphis Pros received a vote of confidence Monday when the American Basketball Association's Board of Trustees voted unanimously to turn down an offer by Florida millionaire Joseph Gregory to buy the franchise.

ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph explained after the five-hour meetng that Gregory's offer had been rejected "because of our confidence in the current management of the Pros and in Memphis as a major league city."

He said that the league "made financial arrangements to allow the franchise to continue operations until the annual June 13 trustees' meeting." At that time, the Pros' management will be expected "to come up with a solution more advantageous to the league and Memphis and we fully expect that solution to be found," Dolph added.

Gregory, a resident of Fort Lauderdale and former owner of the Kentucky Colonels of the ABA, made his offer to buy the Memphis franchise on Saturday. Prospective sale price and other details were not disclosed.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Here's How to Stick Posters to Paneling

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—R. M. wanted to know how to keep posters sticking to her paneled walls. I use double-stick (on both sides) carpet tape on mine and it works very well. Stick tape around the edges in strips about eight inches apart, then peel away the backing and start at the top and press to the wall where the tape is and go on down its length the same way. I find this tape will hold two or three pounds.—L. K.

DEAR POLLY and R. M.—We put hooks in the seams of our paneling and this worked like a charm. For heavier items, such as plates and pictures, we used a nail made for paneling which can be bought at a building supply store. Place such a nail on the panel (not in the seam), pound it gently with a hammer and it will hold securely. —I. G.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—The new rug I bought for my bedroom came folded instead of rolled and now there are several creases that do not want to lie flat. I hope some reader can help me solve this problem. —DOROTHY

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is when I buy something like a scarf or a good-quality necktie and discover when I get home that the salesperson has stapled the sales slip to the bag and then right through the purchased item.—NORMA

What's The Law

Pregnancy Leave Called Rational

By Jack Strauss, LL. B.

Rhoda was seven months pregnant and anxiously infanticipating the arrival of the stork. Employed by the state, however, the state wanted her to do her waiting at home and terminated her employment, under a maternity leave arrangement, over her objection. Indignant, Rhoda sued the state for laying her off, claiming it was in violation of the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution.

"The undisputed fact is," she told the judge, "that medical proof clearly showed that although I was in my seventh month, I was in tip-top shape and fully capable of doing my job. Consequently, the only reason I was let go was because I was a woman and because I was pregnant. Obviously, to hold that against me was discriminatory."

"Ridiculous!" responded a state official. "We can't be expected to go around examining pregnant women every day to see if they can do their jobs. Consequently, we follow a reasonable and firm rule that maternity leaves start two months before a woman's expected delivery date. By scheduling her departure, we avoid an unscheduled arrival."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDE' would you hole the rule to be discriminatory?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while men, women and citizens generally may not be treated differently, different treatment is allowable where justified. And, concluded the judge in effect, imposing maternity leave upon an employee when she reaches the advanced stage of seventh month pregnancy is reasonable and rational. (Based upon a 1972 United States Court of Appeals Decision)

Heart Cocktail Cuts Death Rate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A special "cocktail" for the heart is cutting by half the death rate from a serious complication that often follows heart attacks, a Mexican physician said today.

The complication is a wild, uncontrolled beating of the heart, known as ventricular fibrillation.

The cause is an upset in the chemical balance within heart cells damaged by the heart attack, said Dr. Abdo Bisteni of the National Heart Institute of Mexico in Mexico City.

The "cocktail," given by vein, is designed to correct the imbalance or upset. It consists of glucose, which is a form of sugar, potassium and insulin.

Two quarts are given within 24 hours after a serious heart blockage. This treatment is combined with a low-sodium diet. Potassium leaks out of injured heart cells and sodium outside the cells enters, Bisteni said.

These two chemicals act as electrolytes to govern nerve and electrical signals. The upset in the natural ratio leads to the wild and often fatal heartbeat.

Among 250 heart patients treated with the fluids, the death rate was 6 per cent from fibrillation, Bisteni told the ninth Interamerican Congress of Cardiology.

In contrast, the death rate was 12 to 15 per cent among patients in coronary care centers elsewhere in Mexico City who received the most modern treatment but were not given the electrolyte mixture.

The glucose supplies energy to the damaged heart cells, while the insulin is used as a guide or conductor to take the potassium back into the damaged cells, Bisteni said.

Diets high in potassium were given to the Apollo 16 astronauts to prevent disturbance in their heart rhythms.

Bisteni said the fluid mixture is being administered to heart patients in some centers in the United States and Europe, but is still regarded as controversial by a number of heart specialists.

He said he thought one of its advantages is that it avoids possible undesirable effects that might accompany use of drugs to keep the heart beat regulated.

Senate Boosts Credit Error Corrections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has passed a bill to require timely correction of credit-card and charge-account billing errors, but the measure's chances of becoming law appear nil.

The Senate's 51-to-15 vote Thursday night sent the measure to the House. But consumer advocates in the House were reportedly unimpressed by the Senate bill and not inclined to push for it in this session of Congress.

The bill's chief sponsor in the Senate, William Proxmire, DWis., was so disenchanted with the bill's final form that he voted against it.

He did so after failing to get the Senate to restore two provisions he called essential if the legislation was to give any real consumer protection. The provisions had been knocked out in the Senate Banking Committee.

The Senate turned down 46 to 35 Proxmire's amendment to restore permission for consumers stuck with faulty merchandise to withhold payment from a credit-card issuer, which had taken over the obligation from the merchant.

His other amendment, to ban retroactive finance charges on revolving charge accounts, lost 38 to 38.

The credit-billing error procedures in the bill would require a creditor to resolve a dispute over a charge within 90 days of notification of the alleged error.

He could do this by correcting the mistake or presenting information to show he was not in error.

The creditor could not report a customer to a credit agency as delinquent unless he gave notice the charge was in dispute and told the customer of his report to the agency.

Rural America Has Doctor Shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural America has a dire shortage of doctors, in fact 119 counties and over 1,000 towns have none at all, senators were told Monday.

Weldon V. Barton of the National Farmers Union told a Senate health subcommittee that farm area residents suffer discrimination in health personnel and facilities in comparison with city dwellers.

"The rural scene is characterized by a dire shortage of professional health personnel, especially specialist physicians, and sophisticated equipment," Barton said, "a greater proportion of poverty and aged persons, greater incidence of sickness including chronic illness.

"Compounding all of these impediments to health care in rural areas is the problem of space and widely dispersed population," he said. "Despite various stop-gap programs, the health care problem in rural America is getting more serious."

The Great Plains area has been losing doctors since 1920, he said.

There are no doctors in more than 800 small towns in Montana, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, Barton told the subcommittee which is considering health care legislation. Over 80 per cent of those same towns had a physician in 1920, he added.

"Today the states of Montana, North and South Dakota, Nebraska and Texas have 65 counties with no physician," he said. "Nationwide, 119 counties have no physicians."

Barton said the Farmers Union strongly favors the establishment of rural area health education and service centers under one bill before the subcommittee.

Such centers could become staging areas for the deployment of health personnel and communication with surrounding rural areas, he added.

Ark-Mo Re-elects Smith

At the stockholders' meeting, directors elected were Kendall Berry, Blytheville; Edmund S. Cummings, Jr., Chicago, Illinois; Charles Czeschin, Blytheville; August L. Griesedieck, St. Louis; Floyd W. Lewis, New Orleans; George K. Reeves, Caruthersville; Frank G. Smith, Jr., Blytheville; Henry F. Trotter Pine Bluff, and Gus B. Walton, Mr. Little Rock.

The progress the company has made during the past year was reviewed as well as a report on the $4,000,000 Liquefied Natural Gas facility under construction north of Blytheville. It is approximately 75 per cent completed and will be ready to supplement the pipeline supply prior to the 1972-73 heating season.

The company's construction budget for the year was set at $6,424,000.

At a directors' meeting officers elected were Frank G. Smith, Jr., president and chief executive officer; Charles C. Czeschin, chairman; Chas. R. Newcomb, vice president and secretary; M. J. Cuadra, vice president, operations; J. H. Germanin, vice president, engineering and purchasing; L. T. McSpadden, vice president, legal and personnel; J. C. Safe Cars To Be Stressed

JEFFERSON CITY — The Missouri State Highway Patrol will conduct a special emphasis traffic safety program during May. The theme of the program is 'Safe Driving Starts With A Safe Vehicle'.

Col. E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, the superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, noted that the program is designed to encourage motorists to have their vehicles safety-checked periodically.

"Safe driving does start with a safe vehicle," Hockaday declared. "The most skilled driver in the world can't drive safely in an unsafe car. Brakes that don't hold at a critical moment, a tire that blows out as you are rounding a curve, or windshield wipers that don't function properly in a sudden downpour can cause a serious accident. A periodic safety-check of your vehicle can help reduce the possibility of your having a mishap caused by a defective vehicle."

The patrol superintendent added that motorists should not just depend on the annual mandatory inspection program in Missouri to insure that their vehicles are free of defects all year long. A vehicle can develop a faulty item at anytime. He urged vehicle owners to take upon themselves the responsibility of insuring their safety and that of others by having their vehicles safety-checked periodically and to have any defects corrected.

Milk Inspection Bill Goes To Governor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A broad statewide milk inspection bill was passed by the Senate Friday and sent to the governor with no argument.

The bill had been in a HouseSenate conference committee for a technical correction. Both houses had agreed to the principles of the bill earlier.

A new state milk inspection board would be set up to establish quality standards and it could contract with cities to continue their own milk control programs.

After quick action on the milk bill, the Senate bogged down in a long argument over a bill to set up special school districts to train physically and mentally handicapped children, if the voters approved.

Under one Senate amendment, the ballot would have to show that the new district could levy a tax of up to 25 cents on the $100 valuation.

The bill would apply to all counties. Only Jackson and St. Louis counties have the authority for special school districts now.

MTS Escapee's Freedom Brief

TIPTON, Mo. (AP) — A youth was recaptured less than an hour after he fled from the Missouri Training School for Boys Thursday.

The highway patorl was notified that the inmate was seen climbing into the trunk of a yellow car. Patrolmen stopped the car on Missouri 5 near Tipton. They said it contained the youth, his 15-year- old wife, and the driver, Dolly Frances German, 50, of Bois D'Arc, Mo.

The woman was charged with aiding an escape. The girl was released and the youth was returned to the training school.

The first drive-in gas station with an island was built in Detroit, Mich., in 1910.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Crib Deaths Lead To Parental Guilt

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Three weeks ago I lost my first and only granddaughter. It was a dreadful experience. My daughter said she was fed and bathed at 11 a.m. and put back to bed. About 1:30 p.m. she went upstairs to wake her and found the baby was dead. We raced her to the hospital by ambulance but it was too late. The doctor told us this was a crib death. Could you please write something. It has worried me ever since she died as to what could cause this. It is such a shock when a baby is fat and healthy and only two months old to die suddenly.

Dear Reader—Yes, it is always a terrible shock and disappointment. Fortunately the condition is rare. Several different theories concerning this problem have been studied. Once it was attributed to an enlarged thymus gland, the gland lying over the heart which is exceptionally large in children and diminishes in size with age. The exact way it was felt to cause death was never completely explained. A current theory is that the airway becomes suddenly obstructed—perhaps by spontaneous closure in the larynx area. This has even occurred while a baby was nursing at the breast.

No doubt there are several causes for such tragic events. I can only tell you that these problems don't seem to be inherited and it doesn't mean that the problem will occur again. It certainly does deserve a lot more study.

I want to emphasize emphatically that such a death cannot be prevented by the parents and has no bearing on any known aspect of parental care. Parents suffer needless anguish after this type of a mysterious event, thinking if only they had done this or hadn't done that.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I am 76 years old and I am in good health, but I have been bothered with a hernia for the last three months. I am wondering if I am too old to have surgery.

Dear Reader—There isn't such a thing as being too old to have surgery if it is indicated. Of course, each case has to be evaluated on an individual basis regardless of whether the patient is a newborn or more than 100 years old. In general, people we consider very old can tolerate minor surgery reasonably well, and some can tolerate major surgery. It is amazing what can be accomplished today with the modern advances in surgery and medical support.

French Give Newlyweds Books

By Editorial Research Reports

LONDON — For all their literary pretensions, the French remain one of the least read people of Euorpe. Half of the population admits to owning no books at all. Many Frenchmen never touch a book after leaving school. To correct his situation, the Ministry of National Education is giving away six volumes of the French classics, bound in red, as a cultural trousseau to each couple marrying after April 29. Olivied Guichard, the minister of education, it may be a good way to explaining the move on French celebrate 1972 as the television, confessed to personally selecting the books. (proclaimed by UNESCO), the French classics may ultimately serve to deepen the fears and matrimonial doubts of the newlyweds.

A good book may be the best of friends but, as in life, one must choose carefully. The first set contains "The Red and the Black" by Stendahl. This is the story of Julien Sorel, who begins his career by seducing the mother of the children he is tutoring and ends up at the gillotine.

The second set includes Gustave Flaubert's "Madame Bovary," a frustrated, despairing bourgeois woman who not only betrayed her boring husband but also led him to the brink of financial ruin before ending it all with an overdose of arsenic. Hardly a the public domain could recipe for matrimonial bliss.

It is all very well to tick off the "classics" but has the Ministry of Education given careful enough thought to the selection? "Le Pere Goriot" by Balzac, another choice, is a tale of extreme filial ingratitude. Perhaps the selections are saved by the inclusion of madame de la Fayette's "The Princess of Cleves," the first great French novel, written in 1678. It tells the story of a woman's renunciation of an illicit love.

Certainly the French move is a provocative and imaginative one. It leads one to speculate what comes in American couple might receive along with their license at city hall. A list of books to impose such a diet of disillusionment on the newly married?

One can only think of Rudyard Kipling's verse: "The Devil he grinned behind the bars, and banked the fires high/ 'Did Ye read of that sin in a book?' said he/ and Tomlinson said 'Ay!'

Amtrak Salaries Cut, More Ordered Spent For Trains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, miffed over Amtrak's first-year performance, has cut executive salaries and ordered more spending for passenger cars and ticketing services in an effort to move the trains on time.

"It must be said that many of us are not satisfied that the new management has shown ... much of an improvement thus far," said Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chief sponsor of the $587-million authorization measure passed Thursday.

"What we had in mind was, in effect, bringing in new management of rail passenger service to replace the railroad management which was either unwilling or unable to provide high quality service," said Magnuson.

To illustrate its displeasure, the Senate cut Amtrak President Roger Lewis' annual salary from $125,000 to $60,000.

To remedy this, the bill urges Amtrak to assume as much control as possible instead of relying on the railroads, who still operate the trains under contract.

Amtrak had asked $260 million in fresh federal grants in its budget, but the White House Office of Management and Budget directed it to cut its request to Congress to $170 million.

The House approved the $170 million last March adding $2 million for single Amtrak trains into Canada and Mexico, and cutting management salaries.

To this, the Senate has added another $100 million in grants for operations, and another $150 million in loan guarantees.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., described Amtrak's on-time performance as "mediocre to wretched."

The spending guidelines also put added emphasis on urban corridor travel, and order Amtrak to assume more responsibilities for its trains.

Drafters of the bill charged that railroads gave preference to their own freight trains and contributed to the late-train problem.

Wright Defends Nixon Antibusing Proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — A constitutional expert who helped the Nixon administration draft its antibusing proposals says Congress has a clear constitutional authority to enact it.

Charles Alan Wright, a professor of law at the University of Texas, appeared before the House Education and Labor Committee to defend the proposals against a number of educators, lawyers and civil rights spokesmen have attacked the EEOA as an unconstitutional return to "separate but equal" education of black children.

Wright, an authority on the Constitution and the federal courts, declined to discuss the educational provisions of the bill but said there is no doubt Congress has the power to limit the amount of busing the courts can order to overcome segregation.

Wright said the Supreme Court has never held that there is a constitutional right to attend a racially balanced school or to be bused to school for that purpose.

In its most recent decision on busing, the Charlotte, N.C., case decided a year ago, the court "explicitly rejected the notion that the Constitution requires racial balance and recognized that one-race schools may remain so long as they are not part of a state-enforced segregation," he said.

He spoke specifically of the proposed Equal Educational Opportunity Act, which would severely restrict busing as a remedy for school segregation and provide extra funds to improve the quality of inner-city schools. President Nixon has also proposed a temporary freeze on new court busing orders until the EEOA is enacted.

Last Moon Shot Will Be The Most Exciting

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo flies only once more, before we leave the moon to the solitude of the ages. But Apollo 17 will be the big one, the most exciting of them all.

Armed with a new generation of instruments designed especially for the moon, Apollo 17 above all others will cross unknown frontiers, attempting to answer questions man has asked all through recorded history.

Are gravitational waves, pounding across oceans of space from an early epoch of the universe, telling us when time began?

Is the moon slowly fashioning an atmosphere and interacting with the solar winds to create the building blocks of future life?

Under the bedrock of the uboard, departs for the moon frozen lunar interior, are there Dec 6. layers of ice that man can tap. This time, the target is Taurus Littrow, a region of future. light-colored, steep-sided mountains and dark valleys that may be filled with explosionproduced volcanic ash. Flying over it, Apollo 15 command pilot Al Worden said he saw cinder cones, indicating the presence of volatiles, material that tends to erupt into violent action. Here, rocks may be found that were disgorged from deep within the moon.

But rocks take a back seat on this mission. The experiment that rouses scientists most is one called a surface gravimeter. On the quiet moon, it will detect waves of gravity that may have come across eons of time from the birthplace of the universe.

The existence of such waves was predicted in Einstein's theory of relativity.

Dr. Joseph Weber, a University of Maryland physicist, has devised an instrument to operate on the moon where the slightest wave through an atmosphere 1,000 times more quiet than the earth will trigger a signal.

Life never evolved on the moon because there was no atmosphere and no water. But acid treatment of moon rocks has converted simple organic compounds into amino acids, the building blocks of life.

With another new surface instrument called a mass spectrometer, Apollo 17 will explore the possibility of the moon coming alive in the to make air and water for permanent bases on the moon?

"We'll have many, many says Dr. Rocco Apollo program director. "Not the final Apollo 17, with astronauts Eugene Cernan, Ronald Evans and Dr. Harrison Schmitt

"The device not only will identify its individual components. It may determine that the solar winds implant atoms of hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen and carbon in the lunar soil.

"At night, with cooling and shrinking, we think there are gases being vented by the moon and moving across the surface," Petrone said. "They can tell us if we are seeing the birth of an atmosphere.

The great majority of scientists insist there is no water on the moon but there are dissenters. Apollo 17 will seek an answer to that crucial question.

The "water experiment" is called Surface Electrical Properties. As the astronauts traverse the Taurus Littrow area in the moon rover, the device will penetrate the surface to a depth of 5,000 feet with energy waves. Some of the rays will penetrate bedrock.

"If there is ice under the bedrock, it will be reflected and recorded on tape," Petrone said.

Despite the sophistication of the new instruments the rocks will not be forgotten. For the first time, a trained geologist will apply a lifetime of experience to the mission.

"The astronauts have been intensively trained in geology and they have done their jobs well."

RAY CROMLEY

Nixon Aim: Boom By Election Day

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA)

It is not generally realized just how very determined President Nixon is to have a booming economy by Nov. 7, 1972.

But this urgency in speeding economic recovery is leading him into actions which could boomerang greatly in the next several years.

At the Pentagon, at Health Education and Welfare, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and other large-budget agencies, the bureaucrats who oversee what is bought and when, have been given orders to manage their spending so that a maximum amount of money is pumped into the economy in the months just ahead.

The plan is, further, that some considerable spending which would normally take place in November, December and January will be moved forward where possible to hit the election day fall.

When earlier spending is not feasible, attempts are being made to signal future contracts and future spending in ways that are sufficiently concrete to encourage industry to gear up before November, expanding employment and facilities and increasing inventories.

Behind the scenes, all stops are out in the White House effort to convince the stubbornly independent Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board that the supply of money must be regularly increased at a pace great enough to sustain strong economic growth in the months ahead.

The budget deficit for fiscal 1972 and that projected for fiscal 1973 are at levels which almost insure unsettling inflationary pressures of the same type created by President Johnson's unbalanced war budgets. These pressures, economic analysts now say, brought on the inflation of the present and past several years.

Neither President Nixon nor the Congress apparently have the strength of will to decide on what is not urgently essential in the current budgets and determinedly chop out the deadwood.

The distortions of these policies are already appearing. Despite the overly high unemployment rate, there are indications that employers have been taking on men and women at a faster rate than their business justifies—in anticipation. This could mean slower-than-normal increases in employment at later stages in the recovery.

A money supply arbitrarily increased at a too-rapid pace—combined with heavy federal spending and other artificial stimulants—could effectively destroy the most stringent attempts at price control.

If the inflation pressures increase in the manner outlined above, the price controllers can get as tough as they please, but prices will have a way of rising nevertheless.

This reporter has talked at length with economists who believe that under the best of circumstances we are boxed in permanently at best with an inflation rate of three to four per cent a year. Pressures of the type outlined above could drive those rates up well above that range for the years just ahead.

Lilbourn Officials Sworn In

LILBOURN — Newly elected city officials Monday were administered oaths to office at the monthly council meeting.

Mayor Bill Tope succeeds Jim Dambach. Others sworn were marshal Fred Roe; City Collector Ruth Newton; police judge L.V. Stevens; west Ward Alderman Joe Edward Albright; East Ward Alderman Ed Beavers.

Appointive officers renamed by Mayor Tope were City Clerk Leon Riggs, Treasurer Marjorie Stevens and Fire Chief Speedy Collier.

Tope appointed Bill Jones, council chaplain.

A favorable report on financing a proposed city water expansion and improvement was heard. Approval is expected from the Economic Development Administration of the city's application for a grant.

R.T. Bartlett, New Madrid County Farmers Home Administration, advised the board funds for a loan from his agency were available when the EDA grant is approved. Estimated cost of the improvements is $160,000.

The annual city spring cleanup campaign was set for May 20-27. Advertisements for bids will be made for a contractor. Opening of bids and letting of contracts is scheduled for May 15.

Federal Panel Overturns N.Y. Parochial Aid

NEW YORK (AP) — A special three- judge federal panel has declared unconstitutional a New York law that provided $28 million a year in state funds for parochial and other nonpublic schools.

The decision Thursday barred any further aid under a 1970 statute intended to reimburse the schools for administering tests, recording pupil attendance, compiling health records and other functions mandated by the state.

The court found that the law violated the constitutional separation of church and state.

SAYS FARMERS NOT BOYCOTTING

To the Editor:

In regard to the boycotting by some persons regarding the high meat and food prices and remarks by some chain stores, I respect their right to boycott and protest, but I think every person in Iowa and surrounding agriculture and livestock feeding states should be heard ...

Our farmers and feeders are doing an excellent job producing food for the nation and doing it economically and improving every year. The farmer and feeder doesn't boycott paying his share of taxes, the increased prices on cars, machinery, feeder cattle and all he needs to operate. He keeps operating even though the greater per cent of the time it has been a losing proposition ...

Our farm organizations would be of greater help if they would resolve their differences and use their resources and knowledge and go to bat for their membership on this issue ... — Jim Stille, Schaller, Ia. 51053.

'ALL IN FAMILY'

To the Editor:

In regard to the article about the average worker resenting the Archie Bunker image, where is their sense of humor? Farmers could resent "Hee Haw", too. It implies that they are corny, country bumpkins. But most of us find it very entertaining.

The hospital programs inevitably have the doctor chasing after his patient. Everyone knows that is fiction.

We don't believe everything that happens on soap operas either. "All in The Family" is one of my favorites. — Mrs. Della J. Twait, Rt. 1, Cylinder, Ia.

Bobby Baker Wins Parole From Prison

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bobby Baker, former secretary to Senate Democrats, has won parole from federal prison.

The eight-member U.S. Parole Board did not announce its vote on its decision Thursday to grant the 43-year-old Baker parole. The board, as usual, met behind closed doors.

Baker currently is serving a one-to-three year sentence at an Allenwood, Pa., prison camp for attempted tax evasion, grand larceny, transportation of stolen money, fraud and conspiracy. His parole will be effective June 1.

A one-time page in Congress and a protege of former President Pyndon B. Johnson, Baker began serving his sentence Jan. 14, 1971. He lost his first parole bid last December.

Baker was convicted in January 1967 in U.S. District Court in Washington, but did not begin serving his sentence until his appeals, which eventually ended in the Supreme Court, were exhausted.

The government accused Baker of stealing or transferring stolen money totaling $99,600 in 1962. It allegedly was to be used for senatorial campaign expenses.

First U.S. president to ride in an automobile was President William McKinley, in 1900.

Male Liberation

FREE THE MALE MAN! By Shepherd Mead. Simon and Schuster. $5.95.

Men of the world unite! You have nothing to lose but your chains! At least the ones placed about you by women.

With women's lib so loud on the lip these days, it was foregone that humorist Mead, who seems to publish a dandy little book annually, would turn to the subject of male liberation. And so he has in this funny volume, which gets immediately to the point by noting, "Remember, you are more than 'man' — you are a Male Man! 'Mankind' includes womankind. 'Man' can mean all human beings, and includes women. We of Men's Liberation are for freeing all Mankind, including women — but our first task is to free the Male Man, who needs liberation far more than Female Man at this moment."

Exhorting his male readers to "be proud you're a Masculist" and to join the "Men's Organization to Uplift and Support Each other (MOUSE)," Mead presents a male manifesto which includes, among other demands, equal work from women, earlier retirement for men, an end to sexually segregated draft laws, and sexual equality for men.

Mead, best known perhaps for his "How To Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," writes pithily and well and as he warms to his subject the material gets hotter and the humor better and better.

Woman Will Be Admiral For First Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy Thursday for the first time in its 197-year history named a woman admiral—Alene B. Duerk, an Ohio native who joined the service 29 years ago.

Capt. Duerk, 52, head of the Navy Nurse Corps, was nominated for promotion to flag rank along with 49 men. The nominations were approved by President Nixon and are subject to Senate confirmation.

The Navy's first admiral joins four other women in the armed forces who have been promoted to star rank in the past two years. The Air Force has two women generals and the Army four, two of whom are now retired.

A native of Defiance, Ohio, Capt. Duerk joined the Navy in 1943 after receiving her nursing diploma from the Toledo, Ohio, Hospital School of Nursing.

During World War II she served in naval hospitals in Portsmouth, Va., and Bethesda, Md., and later was assigned to duty aboard the hospital ship Benevolence, where she cared for the sick and wounded in the final assaults against Japan.

After the war Capt. Duerk was released from the service but remained in the Naval Reserve only to be recalled to active duty in June 1951. She served in various nursing and udministrative posts through the 1960s and was named director of the Navy Nurse Corps in May 1970.

Navy officials said Capt. Duerk was on leave and en route to her mother's home in Holgate, Ohio, at the time her promotion was announced.

Food Stamp Distribution Extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Missouri counties and one in Kansas are among 15 in eight states designed to begin food stamp distribution to help needy families.

The Agriculture Department said Wednesday Scott County in Kansas does not have any type of federal food assistance at present.

The other counties, Caldwell, Polk and Shannon in Missouri, will switch from donated commodity distribution programs into food stamps.

Dates for the start of issuance of food stamps will be announced locally after federal and state officials set up timetables, the depurtment said.

Eight counties in the country, including Knox in Missouri, still do not have any type of federal food assistance program in operation or plans for them, the spokesman said.

Birth Control Pill Blamed For VD Rise

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The birth control pill has allowed for greater sexual freedom, but has also contributed to the rise in venereal disease, experts on the disease reported here Wednesday night.

Dr. Bruce P. Webster, chairman of the Second International Venereal Disease Symposium, said the pill has made women more vulnerable because there is no longer the protection offered by the condom. He said the highest risk groups for VD were teen-agers, homosexuals and "the street people."

Dr. Webster and other participants in the two-day symposium appeared at a news conference. The meeting starts today.

Income Of MOPAC Up

ST. LOUIS — Consolidated net income of the Missouri Pacific Railroad and its majority owned subsidiaries for the first quarter rose to $8,543,000 from the $6,720,000 reported in the 1971 period, Downing B. Jenks, president, announced today.

Operating revenues for the quarter climbed to $152,700,000 as compared with $143,823,000 recorded last year, he said.

Coffee Corner by Cherie

I think I must be the only human in the world who's blest with — a husband (I timed him) who takes exactly one half hour to heat a tin of canned soup and put it in a bowl —

a son with some strange disease that's given him lockjaw and made him a mute unless it's a telephone call for him or something is put on the table to eat and then his jaws quiver, pop open and work like crazy til either food or conversation via Alexander Bell is over and snap, closed again —

a second son who has never learned to close his mouth, and is definitely not mute — in fact, he is being treated right now by a doctor for singus nodes which are bumps on the vocal cords due to so much vocal stress, (the cure — silence) - he'll never get well!)

a dog who's favorite pastime is eating the furniture —

a second dog who's favorite pastime is just plain eating —

a back door that keeps sticking —

more stress than patience —

more bottom than bust (just couldn't resist throwing that in there, it went so well)

more sympathy for myself and I'll end up blotting the paper with tears — ENOUGH!!

One nice thing this week, I'm getting something in the mail besides bills and I do love it. Thanks so much for your cookbook orders — I will get these to you just as soon as they roll off the press, and if you haven't ordered yours do so now because I am only printing so many.

"NEGLECTED MOTHERS"

At home alone in an old rocking chair,
Sits an old mother with silvery hair
hoping and praying day after day
for a letter from children miles away.

Her hands are feeble wrinkled and old
A life of hard work are the story they told
A letter children would make her day bright
Don't neglect longer "do it tonight"

Many years she labored without a fee
darning your socks and bandaged your knee
Pinned your diaper and wiped your nose
tied your shoes and washed your clothes.

Can't you recall the days when she was spry
Making candy and your apple pie
don't you feel the touch up on your borw
Write her you love her and "do it now"

Remember your Mother was your best friend
she will love til life shall end
You are her babies no matter how old
In a worn out body beats a heart of gold.

The Daily Standard:

I like your "Daily Standard" but this weird "Love is" - is in my opinion, absolutely indecent. I have managed to avoid it for weeks and tonight I find it outrageously naked & unclothed & void of all that I find humorous. Right below Ann Landers column - please, please - quit publishing this horrid thing.

Four Eye Putting Bank In Benton

BENTON — A law enacted by the Missouri General Assembly to become effective Aug. 13, will likely allow one of four north Scott county banking institutions to open a facility in Benton within one year.

The Oran State Bank, Bank of Chaffee, Scott City Bank and Trust and the Bank of Illmo have expressed interest in establishing a bank at Benton under the bill which allows the establishment of banking facility within 10 miles of the main facility in the same county.

The law signed by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes permits a bank in a third class county with a population of less than 35,000 to have a facility within 10 miles of the bank in a town of less than 1,550 population and without present banking services. Until this law is effective, the extra facility could only be established in the same city and had to be within 4,000 yards of the main banking house.

All four of the north Scott County banks are pointing to Benton in their plans for the new facility. Benton, the county- seat of Scott County, has a population of 550 and is without a banking facility. All four of the banks claim customers from Benton and the farming area in the center of the county.

John W. Ridgeway, deputy commissioner of finance, in Jefferson City, said that the 10-mile distance is measured "as the crow flies" not by road miles, from the main bank to the city limits of the town where the second facility is planned.

Ridgeway added that the facilities involved in the 10 mile locations established under the new law would be similar to the drive- in, walk- in facilities that are within 4,000 yards of the main facility and regulated under the Missouri statutes.

"The new law permits the main banks to establish almost all services except the closing of loans. The only difference in the facilities located 4,000 yards from the main bank and the others located 10 miles, would be that the 10 mile facility would be able to offer safe deposit boxes if they desired," Ridgeway said.

Earl R. Jarvis, president of the Oran State Bank said early this week that their institution filed an application with the Commissioner of Finance on March 29, 1972 seeking to operate a facility in Benton.

Liston Mitchell, vice president of Bank of Chaffee, stated his board of directors has authorized him to start work on the application immediately. He added that while the application is not filed as yet the Bank of Chaffee will be mailing it in to the state board very soon.

Tom Uelsmann, of the Scott City Bank and Trust, said he was working on his application for the Benton facility this week.

Over at Bank of Illmo, Walter Uelsmann, said his board of directors would also be filing an application for the facility later this spring.

More than 100 applications for such facilities are expected to be received by the State Division of Finance, Ridgeway said. There are already more than 40 on file in the state office and the law is not even effective until mid-August.

There are 93 third class counties with a population of less than 35,000. Scott County's population as listed after the 1970 census is 33,250.

Commissioner of Finance H. Duane Pemberton said the new law is expected to improve banking services for rural areas of the state and to eliminate marginal applications for charters.

There are no counties without a bank in the state, but seven counties have only one bank. There are 11 counties with only two banks and 18 counties with three banks.

Benton lost its bank in about 1932 when the federal government closed financial institutions. It was located in what is now the Moore- Harris Abstract building on Kingshighway.

Deputy Commissioner Ridgeway stated there will be no official action on the applications until House Bill 838 allowing the 10- mile facilities becomes law in August. "We will continue accepting applications, then we have the task of processing the papers and making the field inspections," he added.

He would not speculate on when the town of Benton could expect to see modern banking facilities arrive.

But, from the efforts under way and planned by nearby bankers, a banking facility would seem to be a certainty for the county- seat in the near future.

Approximately 9,000 off-shore oil wells have been sunk in the world's continental shelves.

Butler Trial Comes To Halt

MEMPHIS — The financial dispute arising from a 1959 grain swindle incolving Memphis speculator Landon V. 'Jimmie' Butler came to a temporary standstill in federal court with the prospect of further hearings before the case is decided.

Charles Black, attorney for the Louis Dreyfus Corp., plaintiff in the civil trial, was granted two additional weeks in which to explore financial records of the Butler family.

Black said he needed the time to investigate "questionable" exchanges of money between Butler and his wife, Mrs. Sydney J. Butler.

Granting the delay, United States Dist. Judge Bailey Brown outlined the major premises on which his eventual decision will likely be based.

In a civil suit filed in 1968, Dreyfus, one of the largest grain companies in the world, asked for $650,000 in unpaid damages assessed against Butler Dec. 29, 1959, along with $442,000 in interest which has mounted since the judgment.

However, Butler transferred the deed to the family estate to Mrs. Butler in 1953 and transferred the deed to a $99,000 guest house in 1954. The family bank account is also in her name.

Butler filed for bankruptcy in 1955, claiming he has no personal assets and is, therefore, unable to pay off the 1959 judgment. Mrs. Butler testified during the four- day trial she has loaned her husband about $315,000 over the years, including loans to Reynolds Cotton Co., a family business in which she is the principal stockholder.

Butler said he is the sole employe of the firm, and turns all profits from the business over to Mrs. Butler as partial payment of his debts to her.

Mr. Black said yesterday he feels Reynolds Cotton Co. is simply a conduit through which Butler conducts his own business, using Mrs. Butler's ownership of the firm as an excuse to avoid payment of the 1959 judgment.

In his examination of the family's financial records, Black said he will try to discover the exact amount of money which Mrs. Butler has loaned to her husband and the exact amount now due on the loans.

Judge Brown again indicated he will not allow the New York firm to place a lien on the Butler estate as partial payment for the 13- year- old judgment.

King Abandons Petition Drive

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. R. J. "Bus King, R-Clayton, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, announced Monday he is abandoning his petition drive to place state reorganization proposals on the ballot.

King took credit, however, for late-hour action by the legislature in sending a compromise proposal for overhauling the executive branch of state government to the voters Sunday night.

The petition drive launched March 13, King said, "has served the purpose for which it was initiated — to get a proposal on the ballot.

"The speed with which this plan was advanced to its present form," he said, "in the closing hours of the 76th General Assembly—after being virtually buried earlier—makes it obvious that the thrust of our petition drive was primarily responsible for yesterday's action."

King said the drive already has netted about 10,000 signatures or about 10 per cent of what would have been needed to place the "Little Hoover" Commission recommendation on the ballot.

The original proposal would have combined 87 boards, agencies and commissions and 440 state programs under 10 major departments.

A substitute plan for 14 big departments, worked out in the Senate, does essentially the same thing. The principal difference is in the autonomy of the state conservation commission, highway department and the University of Missouri. They would be left intact by the plan now going to the voters.

In dropping the petition drive, King announced a new campaign program which he called "Task Force" calling for volunteer executive talent in state government.

It could save up to $100 million in state funds next year, King said.

"This, coupled with a truly efficient operation in Missouri's Department of Revenue, he said, "could enable us to operate without the need for tax increases."

King said he plans to outline this plan in more detail at meetings with businessmen and community leaders in St. Louis and Springfield in the near future.

If elected governor, King said, he would accelerate plans for state government reorganization with powers already at the disposal of the chief executive with legislative cooperation.

Landgraf and Rust were commended for their work and help in keeping Southeast Missouri politics alive and healthy. Both opposed Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Cape Girardeau, in their bids for congressional seats.

Outline Regional Goals For State Commission

MALDEN — Economic Development took top priority among 10 major objectives presented to the newly-formed State Goals Commission at a public hearing Tuesday night at the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission office.

State Representative and Speaker of the House, James Godfrey of St. Louis, was chairman. About 50 attended.

In Godfrey's opening remarks he said:

"We of the goals commission have come here tonight to find out firsthand from you what your problems and needs are. The ultimate purpose of this effort is to determine what the state government can do to assist you in the solution of your problems."

Those present were presented with the regional goals statements submitted by the Bootheel and Ozark Foothills Regional Goals Committees and given an opportunity to question or submit suggestions to the Commission. The members consisted of Godfrey, representing Gov. Warren E. Hearnes; William "Bill" Ferrell, presidnet of the Missouri State Young Democratic Clubs; Mrs. Lila Bush, representing the executive director of the Missouri Municipal League; Col. N. A. Walker, president of the Kansas City Chapter of Students for Environmental Action; Pat Lynch, Goals Coordinator for the State of Missouri; and Steve Bradford, coordinator of Regional Planning.

Discussed were 10 goals for Missouri listed in order of priority as determined by 58 members on the regional goals committee after spending three months holding hearing in their areas to determine regional needs.

The recommended goals and objectives were: 1) economic development by attracting new industry, planning and coordinating economic development, training manpower for industrial development, development of new crops and new uses for crops, and the establishment of a regional chamber of commerce; 2) education by vocational and technical schools, establishment of junior colleges, providing more programs for low income people, and evaluating existing programs; 3) housing by renovating and replacing substandard housing, coordinating housing programs, providing more low rent housing, improving housing conditions and physical environment, and enacting zoning and land use legislation. 4) health by providing food and drug education classes, establishing nutrition programs, providing more health and dental facilities, providing programs for health care for the aged, more health centers for communicable diseases, providing more family planning services, and providing for regional ambulance service; 5) human resources by responding to the needs of the aged, improving youth opportunities, coordinating social services, expanding foster homes, and providing more-on-the-job employment training opportunities. 6) general government by coordinating local government services, more federal aid for local projects, schools to train local government services, more federal aid for local projects, schools to trail local officials to administer local government, to study the taxing methods of local governments, better public relations and public education of governmental activities, better intergovernmental relations and planning, revenue sharing program, and developing better accounting and accountability procedures.

7) natural resources by protecting water resources and wildlife, developing public sewage systems and facilities for all communities, providing environmental management and the development of natural resource research information, 8) public protection by providing an effective public relations and educating program, providing law enforcement schools, training correctional institution personnel, providing more civil defense plans, 9) recreation and open space by developing county and regional recreation areas, providing recreation for elderly, stronger litter laws, developing historical and cultural facilities.

10) transportation by providing comprehensive transportation planning, rebuilding rural road system, providing more bus service to all communities, providing traffic safety programs, and developing primary highway system.

Godfrey said all comments would be relayed by the commission to the governor and the legislature.

Breakins At Oran School Solved

ORAN — Eight juveniles have been arrested by police and charged with breaking and entering the elementary school Friday and Saturday, Police Chief Dolph Webb said today.

Webb said the juveniles, all students at the school, were picked up Monday and the investigation was concluded last night.

Webb said at 9:30 p.m. four of the juveniles went to the school and one entered the building while the other three watched. He said that about 1 p.m. or 2 p.m. Saturday a second group of teenagers entered the building which had been left open by the first group Friday night.

The second group broke a trombone, ripped down a bulletin board, tore a dictionary and stole a few small items, Ebbb said.

Webb said the stolen items have been recovered.

Enemy Troops Attack Six Miles From Hue

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops attacked within six miles of Hue today after seizing a fire base north of the old imperial capital. Other enemy forces captured the last South Vietnamese stronghold in the northern part of coastal Binh Dinh Province.

A massive U.S. air armada of Air Force, Navy and Marine planes made hundreds of strikes against North Vietnamese positions in South Vietnam but again showed no immediate signs of turning the tide.

In the heaviest raids in more than four years, U.S. fighterbombers flew 618 strikes in all four military regions of South Vietnam, about two-thirds of them in the northernmost provinces of Quang Tri and Thua Thien in efforts to forestall an attack on Hue.

Following the debacle in Quang Tri, Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, commander in the northernmost military region 1, is being replaced.

Vietnamese marines abandoned Fire Base Nancy about 22 miles north of Hue Tuesday after a tank battle. The marines fell back to the My Chang River line, the main defensive position about 20-25 miles north of Hue.

One -quarter of Hue's 200,000 population already has fled, fearing a repeat of the 1968 Tet offensive slaughter in which Communist troops seized and held most of the city for about a month and executed more than 3,000 residents.

Landing Zone English, on the central coast, crumbled after two days of savage attacks that destroyed its artillery and ammunition and inflicted heavy casualties on the south Vietnamese defenders. The several hundred remaining Saigon troops and their families withdrew under the cover of darkness and marched to the coast to ships that carried them to the provincial capital, Qui Nhon.

The fall of English, a regimental command post, completed a sweep of the province by the North Vietnamese. They took three district towns earlier. It left the North Vietnamese in control of 200,000 people, one-fifth of the population of Binh Dinh, gave them a rich rice harvest for their forces, and established a springboard for further thrusts either to the north or south.

Diehlstadt Resignations Latest In Street Dispute

DIEHLSTADT — The resignations Monday night of Chairman Paul Norman and Trustee Grover Morrow from the Diehlstadt Village Board are the latest stemming from a controversey over the proposed opening of two streets.

City Attorney John Wilson of Sikeston resigned the day before the election of Len Allen, James Howard and Lawrence Burton to the board.

Morrow also resigned as city marshal and his two deputies Kenneth Belt and Bobby Chappell were asked to resign. Wilson, Norman, and Morr resigned because they said they could not work with the other board members.

Allen, 78, was appointed village chairman at a meeting last night. He was appointed city marshal April 17 to replace Morrow.

The board appointed Harold Preston and Ervin Thomann to fill the two vacancies.

The new board has different ideas than the old board on what the village needs and how it should be run.

The major controversey has been the proposed

EDWARD L. DOWD of St. Louis, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, spoke to the Jaycees last night at the Country Club. He was introduced by Gene Yokely, past Jaycee president.

Dowd Calls Loss Of Hoover Tragic

Edward L. Dowd, St. Louis, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor and a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told Jaycees last night that the death of J. Edgar Hoover was a tragic loss to the FBI.

Dowd, who spoke at the Jaycee meeting at the Country Club, said "Hover was the epitome of good law enforcement and good government. He was a very human man, a very friendly man, but insisted on performance."

The St. Louis candidate told Jaycees that he is on no payroll other than a private law practice.

He called for state and criminal code reforms, noting that "we need to come up with some protection for the people." Dowd said he referred to a confessed killer being released by the Supreme Court of Missouri because of legal technicalities.

It is wrong, Dowd said, for taxpayers to pay for billboards to be moved or taken down. Even a "watered down version" of the bill to reorganize and streamline state government would save $50 million, Dowd said.

While discussing unemployment, Dowd said the state needs to make an all

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Ever since we can remember we have been hearing that times will be better in the spring.

In every state, in nearly every county, of the United States are small towns in which former business areas have become ghost streets.

The scene is a common one: store windows boarded over; former banks used for storage; dust gathering on empty benches on the sidewalks. Yet, in many of these towns there are more people than ever.

The movement of trade came about as a result of better highways, faster automobiles, and poor promotion by the local merchants. The movement has been largely from villages to county seats and other small cities which had the benefit of newspaper publicity.

But what about the future? Will superhighways, airplanes, and still faster automobiles begin to sap the commercial activity of the county seats and other flourishing small centers of trade? Not necessarily so.

The local merchant holds many advantages over distant competitors. The local consumers will remain loyal IF he thinks he will get a fair price at home. He will remain loyal IF he knows he can find the variety he seeks at home. He will remain loyal IF he realizes how much he will save in transportation and service costs by trading at home. He will remain loyal IF the local merchant demonstrates that the local store is progressive and up-to-date.

In short, every IF concerning the future of the small city merchant depends upon his use of advertising to keep the local consumer interested and informed on the ever-changing goods and services constantly being offered to the consumer by distant competitors.

The Dallas school system has taken leave of its gourd. The academic dementia seems to have begun rather quietly, as these things do. The system imported a handsome bureaucratic type from HEW in Washington to be its superintendent. Then, not too long ago, the teachers were subjected to "sensitivity training" which the system, for frightened reasons of its own, chose to call "Life Awareness." By any name, it is a mental group grope, an exercise in group or collective brainwashing which had its genesis in North Korea. The latest delusion is the "cultural awareness" session for teachers held every Friday after school. The last one we have been informed of featured a great love game where the teachers pin the name of their hero on their back. Object of the game is for Teacher One to ask another teacher to turn around, then say as many nice things as Teacher One can say about the hero whose name he or she sees. Whereupon teachers would be heavily taxed as to credulity should they, with angelic goodness in their hearts, say kind things about George Jackson, who shot a prison guard to death at San Quentin during an attempted jail break; Martin Luther King, the media-anointed saint and instrumentality of Communist radical agitation; or perhaps Gus Hall, leader of the Communist Party, U.S.A. A school system is supposed to prepare its charges for life; imagine the surprise of children when, half-grown, they find the teachers let them down and there is evil in the world, and that no amount of "niceness" will ease the pain of their social imprisonment. Moral: pick your superintendents. Very carefully.

The two giant pandas presented to President Nixon by the Chinese government are now quietly ensconced in the National Zoo in Washington.

Pandas are alo known as bear cats and cat bears. Maybe someone should remind the President to beware the Chinese gifting bears.

DRY-UP JOB
ON 'WETBACKS'

Mexico has deciced to dry up the "wetback" problem. This is the flow of illegal workers across the boarder, which has long strained relations with the United States.

At the heart of the problem is the need to improve living conditions on the southern side of the Rio Grande, and among important measures being taken by the administration of President Luis Echeverria is the encouragement of American companies to build plants in the Mexican border zone.

Some 215 plants employing more than 23,000 persons are now operating in the area. This influx of foreign capital has helped increase the average income of Mexican workers by 7.5 per cent.

In addition to creating new jobs, the Mexican government is promoting more trade between the border towns on both sides. There are 14 Mexican chambers of commerce along the border, which reported $250 million in sales in 1970.

Social and cultural conditions are also improving. PRONAF — The International Frontier Program — has built libraries and Social Security offices in the area and provides counseling services to inform potential emigrants of the problems and disadvantages they face if they cross the border illegally.

Finally, in co-operation with U. S. authorities, Mexico is tracking down and arresting "coyotes" — the recruiters responsible for the wetback traffic. The Mexican Justice Department has already jailed 200 of these animals.

Mixing packages will result in uneven cooking since older beans take longer to cook than fresher ones. Keep the product in the original package until opened. TIP ON CITY
CONGESTION

Operating on the theory that if you can't lick'em, join 'em — in this case motorists — the city of Montepelier, France, is testing a unique transportation system aimed at reducing urban congestion.

According to Traffic Safety magazine, the system is called "Transport Individuel Publique," or TIP, and allows drivers to travel about the city in publicly owned automobiles.

It works like this: A motorist pays a fee for an ignition key that will start any of the system's fleet of cars stationed at various locations in the city. Plastic tokens purchased at local stores allow a driver 11 miles of inner city driving on each token.

Upon reaching his destination, the driver merely drops the car off at a station for another driver to use, he may return home in another TIP car.

The operators of the system claim that one-third of all vehicles could be removed from city streets if traffic were restricted to buses, taxis and TIP cars.

ENGINEERING: STILL GOOD BET

Back in the 1960s, a good engineering graduate was like a star high school athlete - much sought by recruiters.

The recession and sharp cutbacks in federal spending, particularly in the aerospace field, have changed all this — but not changed it as much as may be supposed.

The Engineering Manpower Commission reported a 4.7 per cent unemployment rate among engineers in the summer of 1971. But a seldom reported figure is that two-thirds of these "engineers" did not have degrees in their field, points out Joseph A. Edminister, associate professor of electrical engineering at the University of Akron College of Engineering.

Furthermore, the overwhelming majority were in the aerospace electronics industry, and many of them were reluctant to break home and families ties in hard-hit aerospace centers. Unknown numbers of other engineers made shifts in employment without fanfare and without entering the statistics.

At Akron U., out of 145 engineering graduates in the class of '71, only four were unemployed by December. Average monthly starting salary was $902.

Ohio State University reported that only eight or 10 out of 519 June graduates were unemployed in November.

"The job feast in engineering is probably over," says Lilyan Bradshaw, placement director for the College of Engineering at Ohio State. "The famine never materialized, and the future looks like a comfortable balance of realism."

In other words, while there are certain to be shifts in the job market over the years, there is no question about the continuing need for engineers in the future.

According to the Public Service Company of Colorado, "Tree farming in America started in 1941 with a tract of 120,000 young trees in western Washington. Today more than 33,000 tree farmers are growing forests on over 72 million acres. Forty-five million of these acres are in the South, which expects to double its wood volume production by the year 2000. This will be accomplished by extension of sound forest management to small private ownerships, new tax incentives, and increased federal and state financial assistance for tree planting, timber stand improvement, and fire control."

Though it may not be our personal destiny to stand at the crossroads and direct the traffic of history, still we can choose to become integral parts of a determined group which has espoused some high cause and dedicated its all. Thus are our lives enlarged. They begin to count for something beyond our years. No longer do we live in the limited enclosure of our own efforts and achievements. We become, instead, part of that creative life by which the world is born into new and more glorious existence.

WHAT THEY WOULD CHOOSE

According to press releases, the farmers in the heartland of the U. S. have had little to do these days, "... but watch as a virulent disease moves silently through their fields...." The disease is the corn-leaf blight that struck heavily in the Southeastern part of the U. S last year and spread into the heart of corn producing regions.

In 1970, corn blight and drought combined to wipe out 15 per cent of the nation's corn crop. A major reduction in the 1971 crop, it is said, will be felt quickly in higher prices to consumers to meat, dairy products and poultry. One authority comments, "The biggest question mark overhanging the near-term outlook for inflation does not concern the steel-wage negotiations but the progress of the corn-leaf blight."

It is interesting to conjecture whether those who have so vehemently scorned continued scientific progress -- progress that is continually finding solutions to such problems as corn blight -- would be as strong in their convictions if they were suddenly faced with the choice of getting on the side of science or starving. The day may come when they will have just such a choice.

Why don't more companies offer more information about products in their advertising?

Advertising has three basic functions in the marketing process: to acquaint consumers with a brand name or trademark, to introduce features of a product that are distinctive and to make the consumer want to buy. Many consumers are not attracted to sober, fact-filled recitals of info, so advertising expenditures would be wasted if information was the main thrust. There is some evidence that advertisers are finding it profitable to give sophisticated consumers a more product info and if consumers continue to respond to such ads, other advertisers will follow suit.

What can consumers do to help stop misleading advertising?

Advertisers write what they think will appeal to consumers. Through copy testing they measure response to various appeals. If we buy freely in response to emotionalized, exaggerated sensationalism, we'll continue to get that kind of advertising. When consumers ignore untruthful advertising, merchants cannot afford to continue it. Advertising represents a company's voice to consumers. Reputable companies know that departure from the truth undermines the public's confidence and will not waste dollars and words on such questionable pursuits.

LET SALESMEN
OWN STOCK

Twenty per cent of any given group of salesmen will always produce 80 per cent of the sales.

A good incentive-compensation scale for salesmen slides up: 5% on the first $100,000 sales; 7½% on the second $100,000 and so forth. And don't modify it if some hot salesman brings down the chandeliers and earns a fortune. That's what you wanted.

The word will go thru the sales grapevine and you won't believe the results.

Top salesmen (all salesmen if you can work it) should be given stock options and encouraged to think like owners.

LETTERS

The following suggestions are offered merely as guidance.

Dear Friends:

There is only one way to look when the day is dark, and that is forward, where the sun is shining behind the clouds. Happiness lies in meeting each day with a smile and going ahead.

The pioneer rose with the sun and labored as it crossed the heavens. And when it sank behind a western horizon he cheerfully headed home — tired but happy in the consciousness of a man's work done It is so that I like to think of Life — when a man like your dear Father is called to his reward — with a man's work done.

Sincerely,

H.L. Hunt

THERE'S STILL A WAR

Fresh communist attacks in Vietnam described as the most serious since the Tet offensive should open the eyes of the perpetual doves in the United States. It has been their liberal-slanted contention that Hanoi and the Vietcong were really not war-like after all and that they had good intentions toward the people of South Vietnam and only resented the "interference" of outsiders. But the latest aggression of the North Vietnamese is aimed squarely at the territory and armed forces of Saigon. And it should be kept in mind that these attacks are delivered in the aftermath of the China visit of President Nixon and on the eye of his projected journey to Moscow. Moscow continues to be the inspiring force behind the communists of North Vietnam and the source of their logistic strength.

Great tests are ahead for the determination of the Saigon government and its people. If they can prove their mettle by stopping the onslaught from the North, they will have inflicted a decisive blow to the aspirations of the communsit aggressors. And they will have strengthened our hand in the field of world politics. Victory by the people of South Vietnam will show that we have done a good job in equipping them for the tasks of defense and preparing them for self autonomy. The critics at home will not be silenced but a victory by our allies will diminish the basis of their arguments.

Regardless of the rantings of the liberals in the United States we must continue with some support of Saigon. Too many American men have died in combat and are being held in prison camps for us to cave in now. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — J. Edgar Hoover's intrepid sleuths, who are paid by the taxpayers to solve crimes and catch spies, spend an extra-ordinary amount of their time snooping into the private lives of movie stars, sports heroes, political figures and other public personalities.

The FBI's Los Angeles office, in particular, has kept Hoover informed on the sex habits and political activities of such film celebrities as Rock Hudson, Paul Newman, Marlon Brando, Donald Sutherland, Harry Belafonte and Zero Mostel.

The secret FBI file on actress Jane Fonda, for example, would choke a hippopotamus. She won an Oscar as best actress last month for her performance in the movie "Klute.' But to the FBI, she is a "subversive" and an "anarchist."

These are labels the FBI has used, without much evidence, to justify its costly, continuing surveillance of her.

It's quite true, as the Los Angeles office has reported darkly in a confidential document, that Miss Fonda "has been active in supporting the cause of the Black Panther Party, American Indians and servicemen."

The FBI could have found this out by reading the newspaper. For the turbulent actress hasn't been at all secretive about her political activities.

FBI IS LISTENING

"I spent a lot of time in an ivory tower, kind of up there in Beverly Hills looking through the smog down there....," she explained recently on the Dick Cavett television show. "One day, I dropped down there, and there were people and I began to find out what was happening to the masses of people."

The FBI carefully taped her remarks and placed them in her secret file. A subsequent appearance on the David Frost show was only partially taped. Explain a notation in the file:

"The remainder of the show was devoted to questions from the audience concerning the Vietnam war. The subject (Miss Fonda) did not make any inflammatory remarks, during the question and answer period."

Nevertheless, the transcript of what she said on nationwide television was classified: "Top secret. No foreign Dissenimation. No Dissemination Abroad. Controlled Dissemination. For Background Use Only."

FBI agents have also caught her act at college campuses and military bases around the world. "On September 20, 1971," states a typical entry," Special Agents of the FBI observed that Jane Fonda....appeared at the 'Jam Factory,' a privately owned night club located at 120 Villita Street, San Antonio, Texas....."

"Jane Fonda confined her role to singing and acting out skits with the troupe...." reported the FBI critics. "She spoke briefly .. on several subjects but was unable to concentrate on any particular one within a given time, rather, her speech was of a rambling nature."

The FBI thought it had hit the jackpot when Miss Fonda was arrested shortly after midnight November 3, 1970, for bringing "drugs" into the country from Canada. It turned out that the drugs were vitamin pills and barbiturates prescribed by her doctor.

FONDA'S NOTEBOOK

But she was detained by U.S. Customs at the Cleveland International Airport long enough for agents to go through her belongings. Afterward, the FBI reported gleefully that the search had produced "large quantities of revolutionary literature, including Black Panther Party and White Panther Party newspapers, underground newspapers, anti-Vietnam literature and approximately 25 tapes of unknown content.

"In addition, U.S. Customs found in Fonda's possession a handwritten notewook which contained names, addresses and telephone numbers and many revolutionary and leftist groups....

"A U.S. Customs representative advised that the literature, tapes and notebook that U.S. Customs personnel had taken from Fonda when they arrested her earlier at Cleveland International Airport would now have to be returned to her... as these items were not pertinent to the cases U.S. Customs had charged Fonda with, namely the bringing of the pills and capsules into the country....."

But the FBI reported triumphantly that "the U.S. Customs representatives made available the notebook that had been in Fonda's possession when she was arrested, and a Xerox copy of this notebook is set forth on the following pages. This notebook had several newspapers articles, an item of literature, miscellaneous notes and Fonda's itinerary tucked in the pages of this notebook, and these were also Xeroxed in the order they appeared in the notebook."

The notebook contained the addresses of such movie stars as Kirk Douglas, Paul Newman, Tony Curtis, Vincent Price and Tommy Smothers, although a few radical groups were also listed. Most of the confiscated newspaper clippings came from the New York Times.

All charges were dropped against the actress, but the FBI still has a copy of the private notebook.

NEW YORK (AP) — At least one in every 100 living Americans has had a stroke and survived.

I joined this growing two million-plus group a little over six weeks ago.

The one question everyone asks a stroke victim is, "What did it feel like?" Well, in my case it didn't feel like anything. Nothing.

I'm afraid it wasn't dramatic at all. There was no premonition or warning of any kind. I felt no lightning bolt of pain. Or even a twinge. No confusion. No fainting or falling down. No outcry. No paralysis or numbness.

But when the phone rang on my desk late in the afternoon of March 16, I noticed as I answered it that my voice suddenly was slurring. Having been a hypochondriac since shortly before birth, my mind instantly jumped to the right conclusion: I had had a slight stroke ... and might be in the grip of a continuing one.

"How many martinis did you have at lunch?" my friend remarked. "You sound like you had four."

"None," I told him truthfully. "You know I've been on a temperance binge since the first of the year."

After hanging up, I went out to the office washroom mirror and studied my face. I found I could wrinkle my brows and move both eyes freely. No pain. No feeling of weakness or numbness or lack of coordination in hands, legs or feet. There did seem to be a slight downward turn at the left corner of my mouth, but hardly enough to dent the winning charm of my manly dimple.

I went home and decided not to do anything until morning, which could have been a deadly decision but wasn't. When I awoke, the bathroom mirror confirmed the definite turndown at the corner of my mouth, and a short rendition aloud of the Gettysburg Address sounded like Abraham Lincoln full of martinis. But it was no worse. The stroke was over.

After going to the office and writing my daily column, I reported to the company nurse and doctor who found my blood pressure was still in the gasketblowing range—180 over 140. It should have been 130 or 140 over 80.

Three hours later, I was in a hospital next to the room in which a famous movie star several years before had been treated successfully for his occupational ailment—delirium tremens.

I spent the afternoon drawing up a new will and spent the evening—without the knowledge or consent of my doctor—drinking Irish whisky with several grieving friends. They had gathered there largely, I believe, in the hope that since it was St. Patrick's Day, I would surely reward them by making an immortal deathbed utterance. I made several, as a matter of fact, but nobody bothered to take notes.

I awoke with my first hangover of 1972, one I am beginning to suspect will be the last one of my life.

There followed 15 days of complete bed rest during which they tested everything except my I.Q.—an oversight—and took enough blood from me to give Dracula a bubble bath. Heart action okay. No diabetes. No gold stars for the liver, but blood pressure going steadily down, down, down.

Then, I had a few weeks of recuperation, which is a medical word for loafing. Last week I made a mistake.

I went to the boss and bragged that I was the only one on his staff at the moment with medical proof that he had a normal brain. This was because an encephalogram of my head taken the day before showed no rocks but only explainable routine waves.

"I didn't know we had a brain like that left in the organization," acknowledged the boss. "Do you think it would hurt it if we put it back to work for a change?"

So, one stroke and a little more than six weeks later, here I am back at the typewriter.

A few words of counsel:

For nearly 20 years I have had high blood pressure and carried up to 40 pounds too much weight, the equivalent of lugging around three bowling balls day and night. But I stupidly resisted the doctors' plea to do anything about either.

Now my blood pressure is normal and I have taken off 25 pounds with 15 yet to go.

"You have had your warning," my doctor said. "How long you live now depends pretty much on whether you learned your lesson."

The same is probably true of most of the 30 million Americans who are overweight and the 20 million who have high blood pressure, of whom 10 million are unaware they have.

Living on a sensible diet and taking two pills a day doesn't seem like too high a price to pay for doubling or tripling your chances for a longer life.

An even more immediate reward: You feel better right away and have more energy with which to enjoy life.

Try it—you'll like it, or I'll give you your money back.

I would like to close by thanking many friends and readers across the country who sent me kind messages of encouragement during my illness. It is nice to return to a world in which you feel welcomed. I also am grateful to the writers who wrote substitute columns during my absence, but do wish they hadn't all been quite so clever.

HHH Wins Indiana, Leads In Ohio

AP Political Writer

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, a slim victor over Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in the Indiana Democratic primary, clung to a narrowing lead over Sen. George S. McGovern in Ohio today as the tightest 1972 primary headed toward a photo finish.

Returns from Cuyahoga County—Cleveland, where a massive primary day snarl complicated both the balloting and the counting, began to cut into the already thin Humphrey lead for the state's 38 at-large delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

In addition, the Cuyahoga County balloting faced a possible court challenge.

Even if Humphrey's statewide lead held up, McGovern was running strongly enough around the state to win a significant share of the 153 Ohio delegates.

At midmorning, with the bulk of the Cuyahoga vote yet to be tabulated and only one-third of the Hamilton County—Cincinnati—vote counted before weary election officials went home until tonight, Humphrey led for 80 delegates, including a 13,500-vote margin for the atlarge delegates, McGovern for 50.

The Cuyahoga returns, usually about 25 per cent of the state's Democratic vote total, seemed likely to settle the close contest.

Humphrey claimed the final results would show "a great victory in Ohio."

McGovern's camp, however, was equally confident. "I think we have beat him," claimed Frank Mankiewicz, the South Dakota senator's national political director. He added that the primary proved McGovern can do well in industrial areas. "We have demonstrated that Humphrey does not own the blue collar vote," Mankiewicz said.

There was one sure loser, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington. A poor fourth after 2 1/2 weeks of stumping Ohio, he said he would follow the course of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie and stop campaigning in primaries while remaining a presidential candidate.

Humphrey and McGovern centered their Ohio efforts on appeals to blue collar workers that echoed Wallace in stressing the need for tax reform. McGovern also sought to cut into Humphrey's long-time strength in black areas.

In Indiana, Wallace himself was a major issue. Humphrey fought off the Alabaman's best Northern showing ever to win 55 of the state's 76 convention delegates.

Wallace, however, picked up 21 delegates as he polled 41 per cent of the vote to 47 per cent for Humphrey and 12 per cent for Muskie.

Returns from 4,405 of the state's 4,490 precincts gave Humphrey 344,470 votes, Wallace 306,061 and Muskie 85,400.

The Alabama governor was also on his way to a home-state rout of anti-Wallace party loyalists who control the state's Democratic machinery. His backers won 10 races and led in 12 of 19 other Alabama primary contests.

In the Alabama Senate primaries, veteran Sen. John J. Sparkman led a six-candidate Democratic field while former Postmaster General Winton W. Blount led a field of four Republican hopefuls.

In the day's fourth primary, in the District of Columbia, a slate of delegates committed to Walter E. Fauntroy, the capital's elected representative in Congress, led an uncommitted slate by a 2-1 margin in a contest shunned by the presidential contenders.

President Nixon's backers swept through the four Republican primaries with little opposition.

In Ohio, Humphrey jumped into a small lead soon after the polls closed and held it through the evening as district after district reported only a few hundred votes separating him from McGovern.

Returns from 6,504 of the state's 12,648 polling places in the battle for the state's 38 at- large delegates saw Humphrey's slate leading with 217,977 votes to 203,886 for McGovern's slate.

Trailing were Muskie's slate 53,121, Jackson's 43,888 and former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy's 13,140.

Besides the 38 at- large delegates, Humphrey was leading for 42 delegates in nine congressional districts. McGovern led for 50 delegates in 10 districts.

The long count of paper ballots proceeded through the night after a primary day of unprecedented confusion that provoked a barrage of political charges between Ohio's Democratic governor and Republican secretary of state and led to a federal court suit that kept Cleveland polls open an extra 5½ hours until midnight.

The Cuyahoga County confusion began early in the day when voters found 127 polling places closed at the scheduled 6:30 a.m. EDT opening. In others, there was no electricity for the machines used in congressional and state contests.

At Humphrey's request, U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. Battisti ordered the polls open the extra 5½ hours. That sent McGovern's supporters off to the Ohio Supreme Court, demanding that the Cuyahoga County ballots be impounded and the results elsewhere in the state be kept from the public until the Cleveland polls closed.

In Columbus, Supreme Court Judge Leonard J. Stern rejected the request, saying he lacked authority.

24 Miners Killed; 77 Still Missing

KELLOGG, Idaho (AP) — At least 24 miners died in the nation's richest silver mine after fire swept through mineshafts more than half a mile underground, authorities said today.

Shoshone County Sheriff Lou Gardner said 19 bodies were being brought to the surface in addition to the five which mine officials said were removed from the murky shafts Tuesday.

More than 100 men escaped.

Families and co-workers of miners reported missing huddled over warming stoves on the surface while rescue crews sealed off shafts they had checked but found empty.

First reports said 77 miners were unaccounted for. It was not immediately clear whether the death toll of 24 cited by the sheriff included some of the 77 missing miners.

About 100 rescue personnel were charting areas sealed behind bulkheads to keep flames from spreading into new portions of the mine. The rescuers also were working their way into other smoke-filled shafts as they tried to locate the missing miners.

Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus said in Boise that state authorities will seek as soon as possible to determine the cause of what he said may be Idaho's worst mine disaster.

Some 100 members of the families of the missing men gathered at the concrete-faced mine after the fire broke out late Tuesday morning, then at the behest of mine officials started a long wait in a nearby mine warehouse.

As darkness fell, mine worklights illuminated the entrance to the shaft and a corrugated iron structure housing the mine's hoist machinery.

Mine officials would not say whether they knew the location of the missing men in the labyrinth of tunnels that extend 5,000 feet into the earth.

A Sunshine spokesman said the missing miners have no means of communicating with those above ground, and they have not been heard from since the fire started.

Six Bills Signed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill which included $10 million to pay refunds on state income tax was one of six measures signed Tuesday by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

The governor has now signed 85 bills and vetoed two for this session.

The bill also contained funds to pay state costs in replacing county funds used to distribute surplus commodity food to needy persons and funds to pay for office space rented here by state agencies.

The governor vetoed one item in the bill — $38,428 for the Federal Soldiers Home at St. James. The veto was necessary, the governor said in a statement, because the funds would be used for staff positions not recommended in his budget.

Also signed Tuesday was a bill authorizing approximately $4.5 million in state Park Board funds for land acquisition and park development.

Other bills signed would:

—Increase payments for welfare patients from $150 to $200 per month in practical nursing homes and from $110 to $150 per month in domiciliary nursing homes.

—Change methods for organizing subdistricts in soil and water conservation districts.

PSC Put On Merit System

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Tuesday said he was placing employes of the state Public Service Commission under the merit system by executive order. The order was effective immediately.

Hearnes said he was prompted to take the action because of the turnover in technical people on the PSC staff. Merit system security might help curtail the loss of needed personnel, he speculated.

No one will receive a pay increase as a result of the shift from patronage to merit system status, he pointed out.

Present employes would be required to take merit system examinations, he said, but many will have to be oral tests due to the technical nature of the work. All new employes will have to pass the test before going on the payroll.

Those exempted from the merit status will be the five commissioners appointed by the governor, their secretaries and the PSC's general counsel.

The agency is responsible for regulating public utilities and commercial transportation.

An attempt to extend the merit system by statute to the PSC and the Liquor Control Division failed in the 1971 legislative session.

But the legislature passed a bill this year to bring the Industrial Inspection Division under the merit system.

Ann Landers

Work Makes Man Deathly Sick

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is overwhelming me. I got the idea to write to you when I saw a letter from a teen-ager who vomited every time she had to eat away from home.

My husband has had so many jobs I can't count them. When he starts he always seems happy. He's sure "this is it." Suddenly the whole thing turns sour. It's either a remark his boss made or someone he works with insulted him. Last time it was nothing specific, just a feeling that the people at the place didn't like him. He doesn't want to work there anymore.

It wouldn't be so bad if he'd just quit, but he never does it that way. He gets sick. I mean deathly ill. He vomits, runs a high fever and is so weak he can't get out of bed. Afterwards he goes to the company doctor. "Nothing wrong," the doctor says. You have a 'sensitive stomach.'" I've been reading your column long enough to know this man of mine needs counseling. When I suggest it to him he says, "You and that nutty Ann Landers think counselors are magicians. I don't need counseling, I have to work it out myself."

What can I do, Ann?---His Wife.

Dear Wife: Suggest another doctor. With a little luck he'll find one who will tell him, "Your stomach trouble originates higher up---in your head. You need counseling so you can find out why you can't function in a normal way." Perhaps your husband should be doing a different kind of work. A good therapist will explore this possibility.

Dear Ann Landers: Next week my husband and I will celebrate a big anniversary. My mother has spoiled what would have been a glorious surprise party by tipping me off. This is the fourth time she has done this and it just burns me up. I've told her each time that I'd rather not know. She insists she does it for my own good. She says, "I don't want you to get caught wearing an old dress---or maybe your hair won't look right."

It would be such fun to walk into a room just once and have people yell "SURPRISE", and have it really be a surprise. I've had to fake it three times and now I'm going to fake it again. It not only takes the fun out of it for me but I feel like such a phony baloney.

Any suggestions, Ann?---Maud The Fraud.

Dear Maude: Tell your mother that if she tips you off again you're going to call the hostess and ask her to change the date of the party because somebody blabbed. If your mother is the hostess tell HER to change the date of the party and keep her lip zipped or you won't act surprised.

Dear Ann Landers: Here it is from the horse's mouth, in case that girl from Corning won't take your word for it. I married a man with a drinking problem thinking he would change for me. (God, how he promised!)

When I think that I broke up his marriage I could die. I envy his ex-wife! How I wish I were in her shoes. His children never see him. He won't even sign the birthday cards I buy for him to send. His life consists of working and drinking. I am only 24 years old and I feel like 100. I've decided to go to an Al-Anon meeting next week and get some help for myself since he won't budge. I hope Corning listens to you. I wish I had. You told me not to marry this man.---Detroit Free Press.

Dear D.: I'm glad you're going to give Al-Anon a try. It has helped millions.

Frankly Speaking
By Thomas F. Eagleton

PENSION PLAN HEARINGS REVEAL NEED FOR REFORM

Last year the Senate Labor Subcommittee conducted public hearings to inquire into problems with our system of private pension plans.

During these hearings, the Subcommittee heard the testimony of numerous working people who found, when the time came for retirement, that the pension benefits they had earned and which they had been led to believe would be theirs no longer existed because of some failure in the pension plan. We also heard from the employers of the workers who testified.

Through the facts obtained from these witnesses, the Subcommittee was able to identify specific weaknesses in the basic structure of the private pension system.

Common Problems

The most common problems were these:

– Inadequate vesting, that is, the failure to assure a worker that he has qualified for pension rights under a formula prescribing a specified number of years worked for the company, a particular age reached, or, as is often the case, a combination of these factors. Thus an employee working under a pension plan with no vesting rights – an extreme situation – could work for 40 years for the same employer but find he had no pension if he were laid off the day before he reached retirement age.

– Insufficient funding of assets, resulting in an employee being informed that he will receive no pension, or a reduced pension, because there simply is not enough money in the pension fund to pay all of the benefits that have been promised.

– Violations of fiduciary responsibility by those entrusted with administering, investing and safeguarding the pension fund. These violations range from trustees using the pension funds for their own benefit to instances where the assets have been dissipated because of the trustees' failure to exercise reasonable skill or care in handling the pension fund.

– Laxity in enforcing the patchwork of laws we now have regarding pension funds, thus allowing abuses and illegal practices to continue without being questioned by responsible authorities.

– Failure to inform workers of the details of their pension rights, leaving them in the dark as to what is required of them in order to qualify for retirement benefits and what those benefits are going to be.

Below The Minimum

Additional studies were conducted by the Subcommittee of more than 1,400 pension plans which were selected as illustrations of typical plans covering a wide variety of business situations.

We found that the median retirement benefit from private pensions was only $99 per month. Significantly, this amount, when added to the median Social Security benefit of $129 per month, leaves a total of $228 a month – $13 less than the minimum monthly income required to sustain a retired urban couple, as determined by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

This recital of problems is not intended to be a catalogue of horror stories – indeed, the nation's private pension system is strong and vital.

It has experienced extraordinary growth in recent years – going in assets from $12 billion in 1950 to $130 billion in 1970, and its workers covered from 9.8 million in 1950 to over 30 million today. These startling figures attest to the system's important role.

Nor can the problems in the pension system be traced to any one group. Business, labor, government – all have responsibilities in this area – and all have failed to meet them in one way or another.

But the fact remains that millions of American workers are dependent for the economic security of their retirement years on pension plans that are themselves too insecure to hold any realistic prospect of keeping that promise. And as Chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Aging, I have seen over and over again the sad consequences of old age without an adequate retirement income.

This week in St. Louis I held the first of a series of investigative hearings – to be held in various parts of the country – which will focus on problems that arise when a pension plan is suddenly terminated.

It explored these questions: What happens when a plant or business shuts down or is relocated? What is the effect on pension rights if the pension plan is tied directly to employment at that plant? Even if workers have vested rights, is there enough money in the pension fund to pay the vested benefits? And what about those who have already retired – can their pensions continue to be paid at the full amount? In a later column I will discuss some of the answers we were given.

This is an area that the Subcommittee had not investigated in depth heretofore.

SeMo State Schedules CLEP Tests

A fourth test session of the College Level Examination Program will be held May 13 in Cape Girardeau.

Persons interested in registering to take one or more of the examinations, should contact Gene Haenni, University of Missouri Extension Division Office, SeMo State College, 334-8144, or their local extension center.

CLEP enables adults to obtain college credit by examination. Ninety persons have participated in three previous testing sessions in Cape Girardeau.

CLEP also provides persons with a means of gauging their intellectual achievement.

SeMo State College grants up to 15 hours of CLEP credit. Hundreds of colleges and universities in the United States presently grant credit for satisfactory performance on CLEP examinations.

Test performance of Missouri adults that have participated in CLEP has shown that an adult has at least a 50-50 chance of qualifying for some college credit.

The educational background of program participants, both nationally and locally, has been varied, ranging from some college experience to completion of the eighth grade.

CLEP tests are of two kinds, general and subject matter. The general examinations cover five basic liberal arts subject areas – English, humanities, social science, natural science, and mathematics. Fee for two to five parts of the battery of five general examinations is $25. Fee for one general examination is $15. Subject matter examinations are also $15 per examination. Twenty-seven subject matter examinations are offered.

Tourists Praise Patrol

JEFFERSON CITY – The Missouri highway patrol is a big factor in making Missouri an outstanding tourist state, according to James L. Pasley, director of the Missouri Tourism Commission. "We receive nothing but praise from tourists concerning our great state troopers," said Pasley.

The highway patrol rendered a total of 37,330 services to the motoring public last year on the Interstate highways of Missouri. Included in the total was aid given to 11,909 drivers encountering mechanical problems, 9,040 aids rendered to motorists out of gasoline, 8,986 services due to tire failure, services given to 162 vehicles on fire and 614 miscellaneous services.

Interstate 70 between St. Louis and Kansas City and Interstate 44 between St. Louis and just west of Joplin had the most traffic and kept the patrol the busiest.

"This year, a record number of tourists will visit Missouri," Pasley noted. "The valuable aid given by the courteous troopers of the Highway Patrol is vital to continuing the state's successful tourist program."

Stoddard Court Okays Drawing Of Jail Plans

BLOOMFIELD — The Stoddard County Court has given the green light to a Dexter engineering firm to draw up plans and make specifications for renovation and updating of the existing county jail facilities.

Since October 1971 the court has been studying existing conditions at the jail and considering methods, ways and means of providing the county with new and modern jail facilities.

Under a plan which the court chose earlier the existing jail facilities will be remodeled and enlarged. The living quarters now occupied by Sheriff Edsel Edwards, his wife and son in the front part of the building will be incorporated into the jail proper and used for additional cells and facilities.

If the county court approves plans and specifications submitted by C. R. Trotter and Associates, a Dexter engineering firm, actual building of the facility will be open to bids. The court hopes to have a suitable bid and be ready to proceed with the plan in a few weeks.

At the request of the County Court and County Clerk John M. Capps, a group of representatives from the U.S. Bureau of Prisons – Bill E. Duncan, assistant director chief of correction programs, and a Waller Lamphin and Wayne Potter, law enforcement assistance administrators – came to the county in October 1971 to inspect the jail facilities.

Duncan returned to Bloomfield in February to give technical assistance and make his recommendations. He submitted a set of recommendations to Robert Henzi, executive director for Region 6 of the Law Enforcement Assistance Council.

The County Court then directed a preliminary report on the jail to be made by Trotter and Associates. The brochure compiled by the firm dealt with existing facilities and conditions, jail improvements, alternatives, cost estimates, conclusions and recommendations, and general layouts of building plans.

Three courses of action were proposed for consideration:

* Remodeling existing facilities.

* Building an addition to existing facilities.

* Building a new jail.

At the last meeting of the County Court, the first plan was chosen as being the least expensive and most practical at this time.

Analysis Of Ad Impact Sought

The writer is a master's degree candidate in the University of Missouri Washington reporting program.

By RITA BOHRER

WASHINGTON -- Advertising has stood accused of pushing a drug culture, perverting moral values and making children snack- happy instead of nutrition- conscious.

Some proclaim its innocence, some proclaim its guilt, but no one -- not the lawmaker responsible for regulating advertising, not the writer responsible for creating it -- knows for certain its impact on the consumer.

Much of the basic research remains undone.

This is the argument behind a little- noticed bill that would create a National Institute of Advertising, Marketing and Society.

Sen. Frank Moss (D-Utah) introduced it after his consumers subcommittee found itself "frustrated by a lack of a basic scientific literature accurately describing the psychosocial impact of advertising."

"Put in another way," he told his colleagues, "we are approaching the end of the twentieth century kneedeep in a marketing economy and a consumer culture which we barely comprehend. To the child growing up in America, marketing messages are as pervasive as the air he breathes."

As a matter of fact, today's consumer is confronted with from 500 to 1,500 advertising messages ever day, according to testimony by the associate director of Consumers Union.

The investigation of the subtle, long- term effects of this bombardment will hopefully be as scientifically objective as possible.

As now proposed, the institute would become part of the National Science Foundation and, as NSF has always done, it would fund studies by private and academic researchers rather than carry out its own experiments.

The director, appointed by the president, would be responsible for charging a comprehensive program of research aimed at answering the basic questions about advertising's impact.

Other government agencies and also the institute's own advisory council will also be able to suggest specific studies.

That advisory council would be appointed by the director, with 12 members chosen from business, consumer groups, labor, the academic community and other interested segments of society.

Its main goal will be to help government govern intelligently in matters concerning advertising. Its expert testimony could always be requested by a regulatory agency or congressional committee.

And, if the economic and behavioral research turns up answers that would help the consuming public, the institute would publicize them.

As Moss said, "The institute would have no regulatory powers, but it is envisioned that industry, government and the public at large would make full use of the knowledge developed by the institute to better American life."

The highly specialized research would be powered with an annual budget of $5 million (compared to the $19,565 billion spent on advertising retail goods and services in 1969).

After hearings last October, Moss dropped many provisions of the original bill, which, according to critics, seemed to take advertising's "guilt" for granted.

Also, the institute would not, as first planned, be a part of the regulatory Federal Trade Commission, and it woul not be empowered to intervene, unasked, into the decision - making processes of other agencies, as in the original bill.

Edward Merlis, professional staff member of the Commerce Committee, said in an interview that the more stringent objectivity and the new expertise on the council would gain support for the bill in the Seante.

A vote is not scheduled yet, but there will be further hearings on the proposed institute later in May.

Senator Asks Funds To Fight Pollution

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo) urged an increase in funding for water and waste disposal programs, the Rural Environmental Assistance Program and the Soil Conservation Service, expressing concern over reduction in the Administration fiscal year 1973 budget requests for agriculture programs to control pollution.

Appearing before a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, the Senator noted that the Administration's Agriculture Department budget request for conservation and environmental protection programs is $178.5 million below that appropriated for fiscal year 1972.

"All too often soil erosion clogs our streams and kills our wildlife. Feeding yards and processing of raw agricultural products create serious waste disposal and water pollution problems on which farm operators need technical and financial help. Unchecked run-off brings flooding."

"We in Missouri are deeply concerned about these problems. Not only do they damage our natural resources and impede crop and livestock production, but they also inhibit the economic development of rural areas which cover such a large portion of our state and are so important to its welfare. The smaller cities, towns and people of agriculture need more Federal help, not less, in meeting pollution control problems."

Symington noted that Missouri continues to be one of the country's largest areas in need of water and waste disposal programs, at the same time pointing out the Administration's proposed decrease of $100 million in the national budget for these programs. Missouri already has a backlog of active applications filed with the Farmers Home Administration, and an increase in the number of applications from the State is expected next year.

The Administration request fo r the Rural Environmental Assistance Program totals $140 million, a reduction of $55.5 million below las year's appropriation, and a $2.3 million cut for Missouri.

"A reduced appropriation can only discourage REAP projects by farmers who would otherwise be able to accelerate practices to prevent gulley-creating run- off, continued soil erosion and flooding," the Senator said.

In regard to the Soil Conservation Service, Symington noted that any reduction oin appropriations "would make difficult, if not impossible, the needed extension of services in any state during Fiscal year 1973."

The Senator urged the subcommittee to consider an alternative Agriculture Department budget propsed by the National Association of Conservation Districts, which would include a request of $348.6 million for the Soil Conservation Service, representing a $29 million increase over the Administration request and a $6 million increase above last year's appropriation. Such an increase could have great impact on Missouri, making possible the approval of five new soil and water conservation districts and the Green Hills Resource Conservation Project planning application. Construction on the Clarence Cannon Memorial Watershed could also begin under the NACD budget recommendations.

"Uncontrolled pollution creates losses for the farmer and the nation," Symington remarked. "If we are truly concerned about protecting our environment, we must provide adequate funds for these authorized programs."

Bicyclists Need To Obey Rules

CHICAGO -- Only a stronger emphasis on traffic safety will help prevent bicycle deaths and bicycle- related accidents in the United States this spring and summer, says the National Safety Council.

Last year, 850 bicycle riders died in traffic accidents ithe United States. Another 39,000 bicyclists were injured ir motor vehicle= related accidents.

You can avoid being a bicycle- accident statistic by knowing and abiding by all safety rules.

Drive on the right side of the street, in the same direction as traffic. Obey all traffic signs and signals, using both hands to guide the bicycle except when signaling the intention to stop or turn. Carry all books or packages in an attached basket or carrier.

Never "hitch a ride' from another vehicle. Always ride single file, keeping a safe distance from the vehicle ahead. Be aware of other vehicles entering at intersections as well as parked car doors being opened in your path.

Only one person should ride a bike, unless it is a tandem model or an adult bike with a special baby seat.

On entering traffic, always stop to look for other vehicles and pedestrians, allowing them the right -of - ar Walk the bicycle across busy intersections and all railroad crossings. When you make a left turn at busy intersections, walk the bike across the two streets and enter traffic again on the right side.

Watch out for slippery surfaces such as sand, gravel, or dirt collected along curbs. These may cause wheels to slip when turning or stopping.

When riding in specially designated play areas, look out for children playing. Holes, rocks, and low hanging branches are all potential hazards.

What size bike should you ride? The general rule is that the bicycle should fit the driver. That is, when seated on the bike, the ball of your foot should be able to touch the ground without stretching your leg or leaning the bike to one side.

Equip your bike with a horn or bell that can be heard 100 feet away; a front light visible from 500 feet; and a red rear reflector visible from 300 feet.

Learn the various parts of your bicycle and check to make sure they are in good working order. Have brakes and gear systems repaired only by trained bicycle mechanics.

The National Safety council hopes every bicycle rider is aware of the responsibilities in traffic. Hopefully, this knowledge will result in fewer accidents, deaths and injuries this summer.

Bold Move Asked For Schools

JEFFERSON CITY -- Missouri's new committee studying the future financing of public schools was urged Tuesday to make another ',bold move" on behalf of the state's school children.

"Bold moves aren't uncommon in Missouri," said Arthur L. Mallory, state commissioner of education. "Missourians have been making these moves for education since our state was founded, when it was first decided that education should be offered all the people.

"We're aware that the program we're now offering is not perfect," Mallory continued. "We know that we don't have equal eduational opportunity in this state, not for those with special needs, or for many who're in need of vocational training.

"We also know that the day is long past when an eighth grade education was sufficient. In fact, we're rapidly approaching the point where education will be constant, a life-long process of school and training, more school and re-training. Change is constant and the skills and techniques we're learning today may be completely outdated ten years from now."

Commissioner Mallory spoke at the first working session of the study committee in Jefferson City. The statewide group is composed of 106 Missourians, representing many areas of interest, their purpose is to make an intensive study of the future needs of the state's school children, determine how to pay for that program, and establish ways of equalizing educational opportunities.

Current plans are for the committee's report and recommendations to be submitted to the State Board of Education this Fall. The Board, in turn, then would make recommendations to Missouri's General Assembly, hopefully by December.

In announcing the study, Mallory called in "the single most important thing we're now doing" and said there is a great, growing sense of urgency among public school educators all across Missouri.

Looming ilarge in the background and contributing to that urgency are several recent court decisions declaring that property- tax financing of schools is not fair and euqal. Decisions to this effect have been made in five states and one of the cases, involving Texas, has been appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court. Another important court decision involved special education. In that case, the State of Pennsylvania was given only 90 days to equalize its program of special education.

In Missouri, the future is further clouded by the fact that the coming school year is the last of a four- year commitment by the General Assembly to provide an increase of $35 million per year in state aid to the local school districts.

Missouri now has 619 public school districts with 1,084,682 students enrolled.

"Of course, we're concerned about these court decisions," Commissioner Mallory said. "We're also concerned about our current programs and how we're going to pay for them. But the thing we're most concerned about -- and the most important thing we're going to study and evaluate-- is the quality of the education we'll provide our young people."

This same concern for quality was expressed by Dr. Loran G. Townsend, dean emeritus of the School of Education, University of Missouri, Columbia, and a co-director of the Committee.

"One of the reasons I'm pleased to serve on this Committee," Dr. Townsend said, "is that we'll not be involved with a shuffling around of dollars. We will be concerned with the quality of education."

Dr. Townsend told the group that he isn't pessimistic about the future of education in Missouri, but added there can be no question that the quality of educatin offered in the state is uneven, varying from district to district.

Regarding the Committee's approach to the study, Dr. Townsend added, "It's just as important that we know when to discard an old idea as it is to know when to pick up a new one."

Tuesday afternoon, the committee's our major subcommittees began their first working sessions. Each subcommittee is responsible for a major area of investigation. These study areas are: Sources of funds; the distribution of funds; the educational programs the schools should have; and the organizationai structure of the public schools, including the organization within a district.

Harry Truman Once Again Popular Man

INDEPENDENCE -- Former President Harry S. Truman will be 88 May 8.

In his 88th year of life and his 20th year of retirement, Harry S. Truman is once again a popular man. The politicians have rediscovered him. Democrats running for President can't seem to find enough nice things to say.

Sen.Henry M. Jackson of Washington promised audiences that he would "give 'em hell" the way Truman did. He recalled that it was Truman who showed the world what an underdog can do. Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty said he would "go over the heads of obstructionist politicians and appeal directly to the people as Harry Truman did."

In the former President's home state of Missouri, a candidate for governor tells voters that his new wife inspires him the way Bess inspired Harry in the White House. There is some irony in all this.

Harry Truman left office with the lowest popularity rating in presidential history and to Republican shouts of "communism, corruption and Korea," The President's name was entered in theNew Hampshire presidential primary of 1952, and Estes Kefauver beat him decisively. Soon after that, he announced he would not seek a second term.

It is not Truman the President that the presidential aspirants of 1972 are rushing to emulate, but Truman the candidate. The one who in 1948 sent Tom Dewey home to Albany after his aides had already made reservations for the inaugural ball. The election upset embarrassed the pollsters so badly it took the profession years to recover.

Truman traveled 31,700 miles and gave 356 speeches, most of them from the caboose of a train. He found a villain in the Republican Congress, "that do- nothing, good- for- nothing 80th Congress, that broke the backs of the farmer and the working man." There were no computers, no high- priced private consultants. Truman knew what he wanted to say.

He alled the Republicans a bunch of "Wall Street reactionaries" and "gluttons of privilege." He poked fun at his mustachioed, patrician opponent for refusing to slug it out with him. "Dewey is having such a high- level tea party with the voters," said Truman, "that he is horrified when anyone mentions the facts of life."

Dewey responded to all this by telling voters that "we need a rudder to our ship of state and we need a firm hand on the tiller." On election night President Truman had a Turkish bath, ate a ham sandwich, and went to sleep. If he was nervous, he didn't show it.

The full term to which Truman was elected that day was contentious. His party's platform, described by the Americans for Democratic Action as "the most liberal ever adopted by a major political party in the United States," fared poorly even in the new Democratic-controlled Congress. There was no national health insurance, no federal aid to education, no repeal of the Taft- Hartley Act. By 1950, the nation was involved in the Korean War.

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) was persuading people that Communists had infiltrated the highest levels of the U.S. government. Much of that history has been forgotten today. What politicians do remember, in a year when populaism has become the talisman, is that Harry S. Truman was the last President whose style even remotely fit the earthy image of populism in action.

Amtrack Represents Wave Of Future

By Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON -- Tha National Railroad Passenger Corp. begins its second year of operating the nation's rail passenger service Monday.

The high hopes that accompanied the debut of Amtrak a year ago have long since faded. Created by Congress to make rail travel pleasant and profitable again, Amtrak proceeded to eliminate more than half of all existing passenger trains. The remaining service, it was thought, would pay its own way by atrracting passengers from the discontinued runs.

It hasn't worked out that way. The only money- making routes in the Amtrak network are New York- Washington and New York -Boston. For the fiscal year ending June 30, the quasi- governmental corporation figures to lose around $155 million. Accordingly, the House on March 15 authorized $170 million in appropriations to tide Amtrak over until July 1, 1973. A similar measure approved by the Seante Commerce Committee on April 19 would give Amtrak $272 million.

Futher reductions in passenger rail service are likely 15 months from now. Under the terms of the Rail passenger Service Act of 1970, "Any train or trains in the basic system in whole or in part[that] are not required by the public convenience and nexessity, or [that] will impair the ability of the corporation to adequately provide other services ... may be discontinued" after July 1, 1973.

The success of the New York - Washington Metroliner, Amtrak's most reliable money-maker, would be difficult to duplicate in most other parts of the country. The Metroliner's two- hour, 59-minute travel time compares favorably with motor vehicle or air travel time between the two cities. Moreover, the Metroliners are equipped with the only long- distance rail passenger cars built in the United States since the early 1960s.

Long- haul passenger trains may be beyond rescue. Brenton Welling, Business Week's transportation editor, traveled from Chicago to Seattle on the Empire Builder and reported that only 87 of 261 passenber spaces were occupied. The crew numbered 72, and the train reached Seattle six hours late.

Few businessmen have the time or the inclination to travel great distances by train in the jet age. Welling found that his fellow passengers consisted mainly of the elderly, the railroad buffs, the poor, and present or retired railroad employees traveling on passes.

Harold L. Graham, director of Amtrak's advertising program, nevertheless believes that long- distance rail travel has a future. He sees a vast, untapped market of Europeans and Japanese who would fly to the United States on low-priced excursion tours and then travel around the country by train.

Eventually, Amtrak may have to assume direct operation of passenger trains itself. Under the present system, the railroads continue to provide crews, tracks, signals and communications on a contract basis. The contracts stipulate that Amtrak will pay the costs of these services, plus 5 per cent as a fee and 4 per cent for liability insurance. Critics of this arrangement suspect that some railroads have yielded to the temptation to pad their bills.

Succeed or fail, Amtrak may represent the wave of the future of railroad operation. The troubles of the Penn Central and other carriers have led to speculation that nationalization of the rails is inevitable. It is a step that almost no one favors, but continued mismanagement of one of the country's vigal transportation resources may leave no other choice.

Silent Alarm Nips School Violence

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Ultrasonic technology is helping a public high school overcome racial violence and vandalism.

Using a grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and John F. Kennedy High School has developed a system which silently summons help to any part of the 44-acre campus whenever an emergency or trouble threatens.

Each teacher, administrator and employe is equipped with a pencil-sized ultrasonic transmitter. When triggered it lights a bulb on a large map of the school in the principal's office and also sounds a small horn, alerting the office.

Principal Frank Schimandle says help can be on the scene within 30 seconds. Two parents, hired to walk the school corridors with walkie-talkes, are often the first to arrive.

Schimandle, who assumed his post after a heart attack felled his predecessor in the middle of a student riot, said in an interview Thursday he believes the system has nipped in the bud several potentially major incidents.

Racial incidents in schools usually stem from some dispute between two students which only becomes racial when other students take sides, the principal said. By getting teachers and other staffers on the scene while the incident is still small, he said, bigger trouble is avoided.

Kennedy High's 1,800 students are 15 per cent black, 13 per cent Oriental, 2 per cent Mexican-American and 20 per cent other whites.

The price for such a system is about $15,000 for equipment plus $6,000 for installation, Schimandle reported.

Paragould Man Held In Murder

HARTVILLE, Mo. (AP) — A 28-year-old Paragould, Ark., man was held in Wright County jail here today on murder charges in the slaying of Mansfield City Marshal Homer Fry last May.

Fry was shot to death after interrupting a burglary in the Mansfield business district last May 11. Earlier this week St. Louis police arrested a car wash employe, Donald Tuberville, who was named in a first degree murder warrant from Wright County.

Sheriff Rex Kelly picked up Tuberville Thursday and returned him to Hartville. Tuberville was the only remaining person still sought in connection with the Fry slaying.

Another man sought in the case, Marvin Grissom, McDougal, Ark., was killed last fall in a gun battle with FBI agents in Georgia. Two others, Roger and Jackie Smith of Knobel, Ark., are held in Illinois in connection with the case and are fighting extradition.

The flag that flew over Ft. McHenry when the national anthem was written is preserved in the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. It has 15 stars, for the original 13 states plus Kentucky and Vermont.

out effort to bring in new industry. He noted that 3.4 million are unemployed in the state and unemployment in rural Missouri is increasing, forcing many to move to the cities.

He charged that there is a strong feeling in Missouri against machine politics. The voters are counting on people in state government who aren't interested in the policy of "you scratch my back, I'll scratch yours," he said. "They want leaders interested in the best kind of government, mental retardation, education and who will spend the tax money to the best advantage for all.

raise across the board. Martin said in the event the council did pass a city sales tax he would recommend going with LAGERS.

Mayor Charles Williams appointed Dr. Lowell Nicholson, Dr. T.P. Fenton and Sam Story to liquor commisssion. Wyman Beasley was appointed to the city planning commission.

Martin reported the city had been asked to host a Babe Ruth baseball tournament this summer and said the park would need bleachers installed. The council declined to erect the bleachers.

A bid for an insecticide was accepted from Riverside Chemical Company at $22 per gallon. Sherwin Williams Company's bid for yellow traffic paint at $2.70 per gallon and white traffic paint for $2.60 per gallon was accepted.

City Attorney W. Clifton Banta, Sr., was instructed to draw up an ordinance calling for a city election on the sale of liquor by the drink. The council was petitioned for the sales by more than 20 per cent of the voters in the last election.

Action on this ordinance will be taken at the meeting next Tuesday.

Telephone Progress Related

Dave Hargis, public relations supervisor for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, St. Louis, told about the advances made by the company at the Kiwanis Club meeting Tuesday at the Ramada Inn.

Hargis talked on the role of chemistry in the telephone industry and how chemistry has helped produce better equipment and service.

By using chemistry the telephone company was able to come up with an insulator, plastic polyethelene, to protect underground cable, Hargis said. When the cable is buried there are three things to worry about, contractors, water and gophers.

Hargis demonstrated a laser light that will be able to take care of 900,000,000 telephone calls at one time. Also demonstrated was a telephone that will not have to be dialed. The person making the call talks into the telephone and tells the number he wants to reach.

Hargis also demonstrated how this same telephone can be used to turn on the lights in a house by speaking to it.

Clyde Hankins of Wellsville was a visiting Kiwanian. Other guests were Kris, Kent and Kurt Turnbull. Robert Turnbull was in charge of the program.

opening of Swank and Martin streets to highway 77. One of them, Swank Street, would cut through property that newly elected trustees Burton and Howard have been using for years. Howard has a garage in the middle of the street.

The reason for opening the streets, according to Norman, is to facilitate the movement of traffic through town. Most streets in Diehlstadt are dead ends, and getting on highway 77 would be easier if the streets were opened, Norman said.

Burton says the old board wanted to open the streets "for spite." It was a way of getting back at people who didn't like what was being done, Burton said.

A home owned by Glen Perkins juts out over the other street the board wanted opened. The old board offered Perkins 25 feet of land by his house so he wouldn't need to tear it down, in exchange for property across the street. Perkins never replied to the board.

Burton says the majority of the people don't want the streets opened. He said the present board was elected by 75 to 80 per cent of the voters.

Norman disagrees. He says a majority of the people want the streets opened.

He says a petition the group has proporting to show two-thirds of the property owners wanting the streets to remain closed is not valid. He says 32 of the signers are using parts of town streets and alleys as their own property. He also says some of the people who signed later told him they didn't understand the meaning of the petition.

He says, in effect, the group opposed to opening the streets is trying to claim squatters' rights. He says they expect the village to give them the right to use the streets as their own property.

"I want to see it (Swank Street) opened," he said. "They say we can't open it. I'm going to see."

Whether Norman or the opposition wins probably will be decided by the courts.

The new board does not see any reason why the village needs a city attorney.

Without an attorney, the village lacks the legal power to enforce its laws, something that could come back to haunt the board in the future.

Burton has reportedly said the village board should be disbanded and that the county court should run the town.

While he does not confirm or deny the statement, he does say the previous board was trying to run the town of 160 people like a city.

For instance, he says the town doesn't need auto stickers. The money was supposed to go into a fund for building a town hall, he said, but was used instead to pay for the city attorney.

"A town this size doesn't need what was being forced upon it," he said.

Vida Blue

Blue Signs

BOSTON (AP) — Vida Blue is back in uniform, a borrowed one, with the Oakland A's, but American League rivals won't have to worry about him for awhile.

The 22-year-old southpaw ended his long holdout by signing a 1972 contract for $63,000 Tuesday, then worked out with the A's before a scheduled game with the Boston Red Sox was postponed by rain and severe cold.

Blue put his signature on the contract during a 15-minute meeting with A's owner Charlie Finley, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and l eagu president Joe Cronin.

He was nearly 1 1/2 hours late for the meeting in the league office, but Kuhn, Cronin and Finley waited patiently. It seems that Blue just slept a little late, beyond the 11 a.m. meeting time.

"I'm signed, I'm happy, I'm ready to play," Blue said. "I think the team has a uniform for me, but I don't know."

"We have one," Finley assured him.

The A's had a uniform with them on the trip—one that belonged to pitcher Jim Roland, recently sent to New York Yankees.

Blue met with Oakland Manager Dick Williams and pitching coach Bill Posedel and later threw lightly in the bullpen. He said his conditioning has been limited to running during the holdout and it may be three to four weeks before he's ready to pitch.

The young left-hander compiled a 24-8 record while winning the league's most valuable player and Cy Young awards in his first full season in the majors.

Kuhn announced that Blue's contract provides $50,000 salary, a $5,000 bonus for 1971 and $8,000 "for any possible liability under a contingent four-year college scholarship" which was part of Blue's original bonus arrangement when he signed in 1967.

Hart Tames Panthers

HAYTI — Larry Hart allowed five scattered hits and three runs in pitching the Gideon Bulldogs past the Lilbourn Panthers, 10-3, and into the finals of the sub-district baseball tournament Tuesday afternoon.

Gideon will meet the Hayti Indians in the championship game Wednesday with the winner advancing to the district tournament.

Grant Dambach started on the mound for the Panthers and was the victim of the gopher ball. The Bulldogs hit three roundtrippers in the game to account for six of the four runs Lilbourn scored. Dambach took the less but was relieved by Pat McClarty in the fifth.

Lilbourn jumped out in front with a single run in the third inning but the Bulldogs scored four runs in the same frame with one of the runs coming on a home run by Dewayne Nowlin.

Lilbourn crossed the plate again in the fifth and trailed by only two when the Bulldogs came up. Gideon collected seven hits and scored six times as Herman Huckabee hit a three run homer and Arnold Bell smacked a two run clout.

Lilbourn scored its third run in the seventh. McClarty and Allen swatted two hits apiece for the Panthers.

Mules Edge Bengals

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The Poplar Bluff Mules' golf squad was victorious in varsity golf action Tuesday afternoon as they slipped past Cape Girardeau Central with a low score of 168 to a 170 for the Tigers.

Scoring for Poplar Bluff was headed by medalist John Pettet, who shot a low 38. David McMurray followed with a 42, and Brad Locke and Jim Hobbs both shot 44.

Cape Central's Mike Edwards set the low mark for the Tigers with his 41. Mark McQuary shot a 42. Rick Winschel was next with a 43, and Woody Callicutt shot a 44.

In the junior varsity match the Tigers retaliated by defeating Poplar Bluff, 166-192.

Bill Walker boasted medalist honors by posting the low mark of 36 for Cape Central. Jeff Hutton followed with a 42. The third place was held by Ron Fischer with a 43. Mike Logel shot a 45.

In scoring for Poplar Bluff Pete Godwin led with 44, followed by 47 attained by Lynn Miller and David Tatum. John Osborn was next with a 54.

The 10-2 Mules travel to New Madrid Thursday.

Cape Central Upset, 3-2

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Jackson and Notre Dame high school baseball teams pulled the big upsets in the sub-district baseball tournament Tuesday when they toppled Cape Girardeau Central and Fredericktown. Notre Dame won 5-3 and Jackson took a 3-2 decision.

Good defense and key hitting provided the winners with victory while the losers were victims of errors and spotty pitching.

Terry Bazzell baffled the power hitting lineup of the Central Tigers with his variety of pitches from the left side, allowing six hits, four walks and striking out nine.

Wild pitches opened the door for the Indian victory. Back to back miscues by the pitching in the Jackson fifth allowed the Tribe to tie the score at 2-2 after the Bengals had taken a 2-0 lead in the fourth. Another pair of wild throws in the eighth allowed the winning run to cross home plate.

Roy Birk, working the eighth inning in relief got credit for the defeat after Randy Johnson worked the first seven frames with 13 strikeouts and three safeties.

Notre Dame picked up only four hits off the Blackcats' Steve Kammerman, but used the squeeze play to perfection and took advantage of seven walks to topple the 6-foot-6 hurler and his teammates.

Don Beussink scattered seven hits to the highly favored Cats while walking only two and fanning three.

Coach Jim Glasstetters Bulldogs moved their record to 4-5 for the season.

The Bulldogs opened the game with a pair of runs, taking advantage of early game Blackcat miscues and did the same in the fourth when they rounded out their scoring with three runs. Fredericktown added one run in the second with three runs. Fredericktown added one run in the second and a pair in the fourth and fell prey to tough defensive work by the NDHS diamond crew.

Jackson and Notre Dame meet Thursday at Capaha Park for the sub-district title and a right to move to Chaffee next week for a district battle.

Littell Unbeaten

Mark Littell, righthanded pitcher from Gideon who signed a professional baseball contract with the Kansas City Royals last summer, continued his fine play in the Royals' farm system.

The hard throwing youngster fashioned a two-hitter earlier this week against the Wisconsin Rapids Twins for his second win of the season against no defeats, 8-2. He struck out 13 batters.

Littell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Littell of rural Gideon.

JC Grid Stars To SEMO State

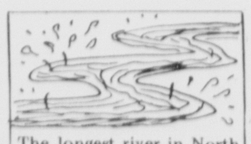
CAPE GIRARDEAU — Two Southeast Missouri football players will be "coming back home" next fall to play the gridiron sport for Southeast Missouri State College, Coach Tom Thrower has announced.

The two are the only junior college transfers lined up so far by Thrower and his staff for the 1972 football season.

One of the newcomers, Benny Johnson, an offensive tackle, is transferring from Centerville, Iowa, Junior College, a school which has provided the Indians with serveral other outstanding transfers transfers during the past several years. Johnson is a graduate of Central High School in Cape Girardeau. He stands 5-10 and weighs 235 pounds.

The other transfer is Steve Rogers, former all-district and all-state player at Chaffee. He has been attending the University of Missouri. Rogers, a defensive back, is 6-1 and tips the scales at 180-pounds.

Thrower has previously announced the recruiting of seven freshman footballers from the southeast Missouri area and 14 from the St. Louis area.



The longest river in North America is not the Mississippi, but the Missouri.

LITTLE ORLEANS, Md. (AP) - A 19-year-old Frederick, Md., youth was wounded when his turkey calls were too realistic.

State police reported that Gary William Clark was sitting in a tree using a turkey call device to lure game Monday when he was shot accidentally by another hunter, Nelson R. Bussard, 33, of Hagerstown.

Clark was admitted to Cumberland Memorial Hospital in fair condition with 12-gauge shotgun pellet wounds of the head, neck and chest, police said.

NEW YORK (AP) - The management of the financially troubled Memphis Pros received a vote of confidence Monday when the American Basketball Association's Board of Trustees voted unanimously to turn down an offer by Florida millionaire Joseph Gregory to buy the franchise.

ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph explained after the five-hour meetng that Gregory's offer had been rejected "because of our confidence in the current management of the Pros and in Memphis as a major league city."

He said that the league "made financial arrangements to allow the franchise to continue operations until the annual June 13 trustees' meeting." At that time, the Pros' management will be expected "to come up with a solution more advantageous to the league and Memphis and we fully expect that solution to be found," Dolph added.

Gregory, a resident of Fort Lauderdale and former owner of the Kentucky Colonels of the ABA, made his offer to buy the Memphis franchise on Saturday. Prospective sale price and other details were not disclosed.

POLLY'S POINTERS

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—R. M. wanted to know how to keep posters sticking to her paneled walls. I use double-stick (on both sides) carpet tape on mine and it works very well. Stick tape around the edges in strips about eight inches apart, then peel away the backing and start at the top and press to the wall where the tape is and go on down its length the same way. I find this tape will hold two or three pounds.—L. K.

DEAR POLLY and R. M.—We put hooks in the seams of our paneling and this worked like a charm. For heavier items, such as plates and pictures, we used a nail made for paneling which can be bought at a building supply store. Place such a nail on the panel (not in the seam), pound it gently with a hammer and it will hold securely. —I. G.

Pregnancy Leave Called Rational

By Jack Strauss, LL. B.

Rhoda was seven months pregnant and anxiously infanticipating the arrival of the stork. Employed by the state, however, the state wanted her to do her waiting at home and terminated her employment, under a maternity leave arrangement, over her objection. Indignant, Rhoda sued the state for laying her off, claiming it was in violation of the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution.

"The undisputed fact is," she told the judge, "that medical proof clearly showed that although I was in my seventh month, I was in tip-top shape and fully capable of doing my job. Consequently, the only reason I was let go was because I was a woman and because I was pregnant. Obviously, to hold that against me was discriminatory."

"Ridiculous!" responded a state official. "We can't be expected to go around examining pregnant women every day to see if they can do their jobs. Consequently, we follow a reasonable and firm rule that maternity leaves start two months before a woman's expected delivery date. By scheduling her departure, we avoid an unscheduled arrival."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDE' would you hole the rule to be discriminatory?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while men, women and citizens generally may not be treated differently, different treatment is allowable where justified. And, concluded the judge in effect, imposing maternity leave upon an employee when she reaches the advanced stage of seventh month pregnancy is reasonable and rational. Heart Cocktail Cuts Death Rate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A special "cocktail" for the heart is cutting by half the death rate from a serious complication that often follows heart attacks, a Mexican physician said today.

The complication is a wild, uncontrolled beating of the heart, known as ventricular fibrillation.

The cause is an upset in the chemical balance within heart cells damaged by the heart attack, said Dr. Abdo Bisteni of the National Heart Institute of Mexico in Mexico City.

The "cocktail," given by vein, is designed to correct the imbalance or upset. It consists of glucose, which is a form of sugar, potassium and insulin.

Two quarts are given within 24 hours after a serious heart blockage. This treatment is combined with a low-sodium diet. Potassium leaks out of injured heart cells and sodium outside the cells enters, Bisteni said.

These two chemicals act as electrolytes to govern nerve and electrical signals. The upset in the natural ratio leads to the wild and often fatal heartbeat.

Among 250 heart patients treated with the fluids, the death rate was 6 per cent from fibrillation, Bisteni told the ninth Interamerican Congress of Cardiology.

In contrast, the death rate was 12 to 15 per cent among patients in coronary care centers elsewhere in Mexico City who received the most modern treatment but were not given the electrolyte mixture.

The glucose supplies energy to the damaged heart cells, while the insulin is used as a guide or conductor to take the potassium back into the damaged cells, Bisteni said.

Diets high in potassium were given to the Apollo 16 astronauts to prevent disturbance in their heart rhythms.

Bisteni said the fluid mixture is being administered to heart patients in some centers in the United States and Europe, but is still regarded as controversial by a number of heart specialists.

He said he thought one of its advantages is that it avoids possible undesirable effects that might accompany use of drugs to keep the heart beat regulated.

Senate Boosts Credit Error Corrections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has passed a bill to require timely correction of credit-card and charge-account billing errors, but the measure's chances of becoming law appear nil.

The Senate's 51-to-15 vote Thursday night sent the measure to the House. But consumer advocates in the House were reportedly unimpressed by the Senate bill and not inclined to push for it in this session of Congress.

The bill's chief sponsor in the Senate, William Proxmire, DWis., was so disenchanted with the bill's final form that he voted against it.

He did so after failing to get the Senate to restore two provisions he called essential if the legislation was to give any real consumer protection. The provisions had been knocked out in the Senate Banking Committee.

The Senate turned down 46 to 35 Proxmire's amendment to restore permission for consumers stuck with faulty merchandise to withhold payment from a credit-card issuer, which had taken over the obligation from the merchant.

His other amendment, to ban retroactive finance charges on revolving charge accounts, lost 38 to 38.

The credit-billing error procedures in the bill would require a creditor to resolve a dispute over a charge within 90 days of notification of the alleged error.

He could do this by correcting the mistake or presenting information to show he was not in error.

The creditor could not report a customer to a credit agency as delinquent unless he gave notice the charge was in dispute and told the customer of his report to the agency.

Rural America Has Doctor Shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural America has a dire shortage of doctors, in fact 119 counties and over 1,000 towns have none at all, senators were told Monday.

Weldon V. Barton of the National Farmers Union told a Senate health subcommittee that farm area residents suffer discrimination in health personnel and facilities in comparison with city dwellers.

"The rural scene is characterized by a dire shortage of professional health personnel, especially specialist physicians, and sophisticated equipment," Barton said, "a greater proportion of poverty and aged persons, greater incidence of sickness including chronic illness.

"Compounding all of these impediments to health care in rural areas is the problem of space and widely dispersed population," he said. "Despite various stop-gap programs, the health care problem in rural America is getting more serious."

The Great Plains area has been losing doctors since 1920, he said.

There are no doctors in more than 800 small towns in Montana, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, Barton told the subcommittee which is considering health care legislation. Over 80 per cent of those same towns had a physician in 1920, he added.

"Today the states of Montana, North and South Dakota, Nebraska and Texas have 65 counties with no physician," he said. "Nationwide, 119 counties have no physicians."

Barton said the Farmers Union strongly favors the establishment of rural area health education and service centers under one bill before the subcommittee.

Such centers could become staging areas for the deployment of health personnel and communication with surrounding rural areas, he added.

Ark-Mo Re-elects Smith

At the stockholders' meeting, directors elected were Kendall Berry, Blytheville; Edmund S. Cummings, Jr., Chicago, Illinois; Charles Czeschin, Blytheville; August L. Griesedieck, St. Louis; Floyd W. Lewis, New Orleans; George K. Reeves, Caruthersville; Frank G. Smith, Jr., Blytheville; Henry F. Trotter Pine Bluff, and Gus B. Walton, Mr. Little Rock.

The progress the company has made during the past year was reviewed as well as a report on the $4,000,000 Liquefied Natural Gas facility under construction north of Blytheville. It is approximately 75 per cent completed and will be ready to supplement the pipeline supply prior to the 1972-73 heating season.

The company's construction budget for the year was set at $6,424,000.

Safe Cars To Be Stressed

JEFFERSON CITY — The Missouri State Highway Patrol will conduct a special emphasis traffic safety program during May. The theme of the program is 'Safe Driving Starts With A Safe Vehicle'.

Col. E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, the superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, noted that the program is designed to encourage motorists to have their vehicles safety-checked periodically.

"Safe driving does start with a safe vehicle," Hockaday declared. "The most skilled driver in the world can't drive safely in an unsafe car. Brakes that don't hold at a critical moment, a tire that blows out as you are rounding a curve, or windshield wipers that don't function properly in a sudden downpour can cause a serious accident. A periodic safety-check of your vehicle can help reduce the possibility of your having a mishap caused by a defective vehicle."

The patrol superintendent added that motorists should not just depend on the annual mandatory inspection program in Missouri to insure that their vehicles are free of defects all year long. A vehicle can develop a faulty item at anytime. He urged vehicle owners to take upon themselves the responsibility of insuring their safety and that of others by having their vehicles safety-checked periodically and to have any defects corrected.

Milk Inspection Bill Goes To Governor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A broad statewide milk inspection bill was passed by the Senate Friday and sent to the governor with no argument.

The bill had been in a HouseSenate conference committee for a technical correction. Both houses had agreed to the principles of the bill earlier.

A new state milk inspection board would be set up to establish quality standards and it could contract with cities to continue their own milk control programs.

After quick action on the milk bill, the Senate bogged down in a long argument over a bill to set up special school districts to train physically and mentally handicapped children, if the voters approved.

Under one Senate amendment, the ballot would have to show that the new district could levy a tax of up to 25 cents on the $100 valuation.

The bill would apply to all counties. Only Jackson and St. Louis counties have the authority for special school districts now.

MTS Escapee's Freedom Brief

TIPTON, Mo. (AP) -- A youth was recaptured less than an hour after he fled from the Missouri Training School for Boys Thursday.

The highway patorl was notified that the inmate was seen climbing into the trunk of a yellow car. Patrolmen stopped the car on Missouri 5 near Tipton. They said it contained the youth, his 15-year- old wife, and the driver, Dolly Frances German, 50, of Bois D'Arc, Mo.

The woman was charged with aiding an escape. The girl was released and the youth was returned to the training school.

The first drive-in gas station with an island was built in Detroit, Mich., in 1910.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Crib Deaths Lead To Parental Guilt

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Three weeks ago I lost my first and only granddaughter. It was a dreadful experience. My daughter said she was fed and bathed at 11 a.m. and put back to bed. About 1:30 p.m. she went upstairs to wake her and found the baby was dead. We raced her to the hospital by ambulance, but it was too late. The doctor told us this was a crib death. Could you please write something. It has worried me ever since she died as to what could cause this. It is such a shock when a baby is fat and healthy and only two months old to die suddenly.

Dear Reader — Yes, it is always a terrible shock and disappointment. Fortunately, the condition is rare. Several different theories concerning this problem have been studied. Once it was attributed to an enlarged thymus gland, the gland lying over the heart which is exceptionally large in children and diminishes in size with age. The exact way it was felt to cause death was never completely explained. A current theory is that the airway becomes suddenly obstructed — perhaps by spontaneous closure in the larynx area. This has even occurred while a baby was nursing at the breast.

No doubt there are several causes for such tragic events. I can only tell you that these problems don't seem to be inherited and I don't mean that the problem will occur again. It certainly does deserve a lot more study.

I want to emphasize emphatically that such a death cannot be prevented by the parents and has no bearing on any known aspect of parental care. Parents suffer needless anguish after this type of a mysterious event thinking, if only they had done this or hadn't done that.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am 28 years old and I am in good health, but I have been bothered with a hernia for the last three months. I am wondering if I am too old to have surgery.

Dear Reader — There isn't such a thing as being too old to have surgery if it is indicated. Of course each case has to be evaluated on an individual basis regardless of whether the patient is a newborn or more than 100 years old. In general, people we consider very old can tolerate minor surgery reasonably well, and some can tolerate major surgery. It is amazing what can be accomplished today with the modern advances in surgery and medical support.

French Give Newlyweds Books

By Editorial Research Reports

LONDON — For all their literary pretensions, the French remain one of the least read people of Europe. Half of the population admits to owning no books at all. Many Frenchmen never touch a book after leaving school. To correct his situation, the Ministry of National Education is giving away six volumes of the French classics, bound in red, as a cultural trousseau to each couple marrying after April 29.

Olivied Guichard, the minister of education, is explaining the move on French television, confessed to international book year personally selecting the books, (proclaimed by UNESCO), the French classics may ultimately serve to deepen the fears and matrimonial doubts of the newlyweds.

A good book may be the best of friends but, as in life, one must choose carefully. The first set contains "The Red and the Black" by Stendahl. This is the story of Julien Sorel, who begins his career by seducing the mother of the children he is tutoring and ends up at the guillotine.

The second set includes Gustave Flaubert's "Madame Bovary," a frustrated, despairing bourgeois woman who not only betrayed her boring husband but also led him to the brink of financial ruin before ending it all with an overdose of arsenic. Hardly a the public domain could recipe for matrimonial bliss.

It is all very well to tick off a list of classics — but has the Ministry of Education given careful enough thought to the selection? "Le Pere Goriot" by Balzac, another choice, is a tale of extreme filial ingratitude. Perhaps the selections are saved by the inclusion of madame de la Fayette's "The Princess of Cleves," the first great French novel, written in 1678. It tells the story of a woman's renunciation of an illicit love.

Certainly the French move a provocative and imaginative one. It leads one to speculate what homes a American couple receive along with their license to enjoy half. A list of books include such classics as Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter," Henry James's "Daisy Miller," and Stephen Crane's "Maggie: A girl of the Streets."

If the choice were extended to include English novelists, Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," Samuel Butler's "The Way of All Flesh," and Emily Bronte's "Wuthering Heights" would have to be included. But who could improve such a diet of disillusionment on the newly married?

One can only think of Rudyard Kipling's verse: "The Devil he grinned behind the bars, and banked the fires high; 'Did Ye read of that sin in a book?' said he; and Tomlinson said 'Ay!'

Amtrak Salaries Cut, More Ordered Spent For Trains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, miffed over Amtrak's first year performance, has cut executive salaries and ordered more spending for passenger cars and ticketing services in an effort to move the trains on time.

"It must be said that many of us are not satisfied that the new management has shown ... much of an improvement thus far," said Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chief sponsor of the $587 million authorization measure passed Thursday.

"What we had in mind was, in effect, bringing in new management of rail passenger service to replace the railroad management which was either unwilling or unable to provide high quality service," said Magnuson.

To illustrate its displeasure, the Senate cut Amtrak President Roger Lewis' annual salary from $125,000 to $60,000.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., described Amtrak's on-time performance as "mediocre to wretched."

The spending guidelines also put added emphasis on urban corridor travel, and order Amtrak to assume more responsibilities for its trains.

Drafters of the bill charged that railroads gave preference to their own freight trains and contributed to the late-train problem.

To remedy this, the bill urges Amtrak to assume as much control as possible instead of relying on the railroads, who still operate the trains under contract.

Amtrak had asked $260 million in fresh federal grants in its budget, but the White House Office of Management and Budget directed it to cut its request to Congress to $170 million.

The House approved the $170 million last March adding $2 million for single Amtrak trains into Canada and Mexico, and cutting management salaries.

To this, the Senate has added another $100 million in grants for operations, and another $150 million in loan guarantees.

Wright Defends Nixon Antibusing Proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — A widespread criticism of other constitutional expert who helped the Nixon administration draft its proposed Equal Educational antibusing proposals says Congress has a clear constitutional authority to enact it.

Charles Alan Wright, a professor of law at the University of Texas, appeared before the House Education and Labor Committee to defend the proposals against segregation.

Wright said the Supreme Court has never held that there is a constitutional right to attend a racially balanced school or to be bused to school for that purpose.

In its most recent decision on busing, the Charlotte, N.C., case decided a year ago, the court "explicitly rejected the notion that the Constitution requires racial balance and recognized that one-race schools may remain so long as they are not part of state-enforced segregation," he said.

A number of educators, lawyers and civil rights spokesmen have attacked the EEOA as an unconstitutional return to "separate but equal" education of black children.

Wright, an authority on the Constitution and the federal courts, declined to discuss the educational provisions of the bill but said there is no doubt Congress has the power to limit the amount of busing the courts can order to overcome segregation.

Wright said the Supreme Court has never held that there is a constitutional right to attend a racially balanced school or to be bused to school for that purpose.

In its most recent decision on busing, the Charlotte, N.C., case decided a year ago, the court "explicitly rejected the notion that the Constitution requires racial balance and recognized that one-race schools may remain so long as they are not part of state-enforced segregation," he said.

Last Moon Shot Will Be The Most Exciting

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo flies only once more, before we leave the moon to the solitude of the ages. But Apollo 17 will be the big one, the most exciting of them all.

Armed with a new generation of instruments designed especially for the moon, Apollo 17 above all others will cross unknown frontiers, attempting to answer questions man has asked all through recorded history.

— Are gravitational waves, the pounding pulse of energy from an early epoch of the universe, telling us when time began?

— Is the moon slowly fashioning an atmosphere and interacting with the solar winds.

— Under the bedrock of the moon, departs for the moon to make air and water for frozen lunar interior, are there permanent bases on the moon?

"We'll have many, many answers," says Dr. Rocco Petrone, Apollo program director. "Not the final answers, no. But a far better and Dr. Harrison Schmitt of Eugene Cernan, Ronald Evans understanding of it all."

RAY CROMLEY

Nixon Aim: Boom By Election Day

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA)

It is not generally realized just how very determined President Nixon is to have a booming economy by Nov. 7, 1972.

But his urgency in speeding economic recovery is leading into an inflation which could boomerang greatly in the next several years.

At the Pentagon, at Health Education and Welfare, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and other large-budget agencies, the bureaucrats who oversee what is bought and when, have been given orders to manage their spending so that a maximum amount of money is pumped into the economy in the months just ahead.

The plan is, further, that some considerable spending which would normally take place in November, December and January will be moved forward where possible to hit in there is fall.

When earlier spending is not feasible, attempts are being made to signal future contracts and future spending in ways that are sufficiently concrete to encourage industry to gear up before November expanding employment and facilities and increasing inventories.

Behind the scenes, all stops are out in the White House effort to convince the ordinarily independent Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board that the supply of money must be regularly increased at a pace great enough to sustain strong economic growth in the months ahead.

The budget deficit for fiscal 1972 and that projected for fiscal 1973 are at levels which almost insure unsettling inflationary pressures of the same type created by President Johnson's unbalanced war budgets. These pressures economic analysts now say, brought on the inflation of the present and past several years.

Neither President Nixon nor the Congress apparently have the strength of will to decide on what is not urgently essential in the current budgets and determinedly chop out the deadwood.

The distortions of these policies are already appearing. Despite the overly high unemployment rate, there are indications that employers have been taking on men and women at a faster rate than their business justifies — in anticipation. This could mean slower-than-normal increases in employment at later stages in the recovery.

A money supply arbitrarily increased at a too-rapid pace — combined with heavy federal spending and other artificial stimulants — could effectively destroy the most stringent attempts at price control.

If the inflation pressures increase in the manner outlined above, the price controllers can get as tough as they please, but prices will have a way of rising nevertheless.

This reporter has talked at length with economists who believe that under the best of circumstances we are boxed in permanently at best with an inflation rate of three to four per cent a year. Pressures of the type outlined above could drive those rates up well above that range for the years just ahead.

Taurus-Littrow, a region of future.

light-colored, steep-sided mountains and dark valleys that may be filled with explosion-produced volcanic ash. Flying over it, Apollo 17 command pilot Al Worden said he saw cinder cones, indicating the presence of volatiles material that tends to erupt into violent action. Here, rocks may be found that were disgorged from deep within the moon.

But rocks take a back seat on this mission. The experiment that rouses scientists most is one called a surface gravimeter. On the quiet moon, it will detect waves of gravity that may have come across eons of time from the birthplace of the universe.

The existence of such waves was predicted in Einstein's theory of relativity.

Dr. Joseph Weber, physicist, has devised an instrument to operate on the moon where the slightest wave through an atmosphere 1,000 times more quiet than the earth will trigger a signal.

Life never evolved on the moon because there was no atmosphere and no water. But acid treatment of moon rocks has converted simple organic compounds into amino acids, the building blocks of life.

With another new surface instrument called a mass spectrometer, Apollo 17 will explore the possibility of the moon coming alive in the

The device not only will measure the thin, tenuous atmosphere of the moon but identify its individual components. It may determine that the solar winds implant atoms of hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen and carbon in the lunar soil.

"At night, with cooling and shrinking, we think there are gases being vented by the moon and moving across the surface," Petrone said. "They can tell us if we are seeing the birth of an atmosphere."

The great majority of scientists insist there is no water on the moon, but there are dissenters. Apollo 17 will seek an answer to that crucial question.

The "water experiment" is called Surface Electrical Properties. As the astronauts traverse the Taurus-Littrow area in the moon rover, the device will penetrate the surface to a depth of 5,000 feet with energy waves. Some of the rays will penetrate bedrock.

"If there is ice under the bedrock, it will be reflected and recorded on tape," Petrone said.

Despite the sophistication of the new instruments the rocks will not be forgotten. For the first time, a trained geologist will apply a lifetime of experience to the mission.

"The astronauts have been intensively trained in geology and they have done their jobs well."

Federal Panel Overturns N.Y. Parochial Aid

NEW YORK (AP) — A special three- judge federal panel has declared unconstitutional a New York law that provided $28 million a year in state funds for parochial and other nonpublic schools.

The decision Thursday barred any further aid under a 1970 statute intended to reimburse the schools for administering tests, recording pupil attendance, compiling health records and other functions mandated by the state.

The court found that the law violated the constitutional separation of church and state.

SAYS FARMERS NOT BOYCOTTING

To the Editor:

In regard to the boycotting by some persons regarding the high meat and food prices and remarks by some chain stores, I respect their right to boycott and protest, but I think every person in Iowa and surrounding agriculture and livestock feeding states should be heard ...

Our farmers and feeders are doing an excellent job producing food for the nation and doing it economically and improving every year. The farmer and feeder doesn't boycott paying his share of taxes, the increased prices on cars, machinery, feeder cattle and all he needs to operate. He keeps operating even though the greater per cent of the time it has been a losing proposition ...

Our farm organizations would be of greater help if they would resolve their differences and use their resources and knowledge and go to bat for their membership on this issue ... — Jim Stille, Schaller, Ia. 51053.

'ALL IN FAMILY'

To the Editor:

In regard to the article about the average worker resenting the Archie Bunker image, where is their sense of humor? Farmers could resent "Hee Haw", too. It implies that they are corny, country bumpkins. But most of us find it very entertaining.

The hospital programs inevitably have the doctor chasing after his patient. Everyone knows that is fiction.

We don't believe everything that happens on soap operas either. "All in The Family" is one of my favorites. — Mrs. Della J. Twait, Rt. 1, Cylinder, Ia.

Bobby Baker Wins Parole From Prison

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bobby Baker, former secretary to Senate Democrats, has won parole from federal prison.

The eight-member U.S. Parole Board did no t announce its vote on its decision Thursday to grant the 43-year-old Baker parole. The board, as usual, met behind closed doors.

Baker currently is serving a one-to-three year sentence at an Allenwood, Pa., prison camp for attempted tax evasion, grand larceny, transportation of stolen money, fraud and conspiracy. His parole will be effective June 1.

A one-time page in Congress and a protege of former President Pyndon B. Johnson, Baker began serving his sentence Jan. 14, 1971. He lost his first parole bid last December.

Baker was convicted in January 1967 in U.S. District Court in Washington, but did not begin serving his sentence until his appeals, which eventually ended in the Supreme Court, were exhausted.

The government accused Baker of stealing or transferring stolen money totaling $99,600 in 1962. It allegedly was to be used for senatorial campaign expenses.

First U.S. president to ride in an automobile was President William McKinley, in 1900.

Male Liberation

FREE THE MALE MAN! By Shepherd Mead. Simon and Schuster. $5.95.

Men of the world unite! You have nothing to lose but your chains! At least the ones placed about you by women.

With women's lib so loud on the lip these days, it was foregone that humorist Mead, who seems to publish a dandy little book annually, would turn to the subject of male liberation. And so he has in this funny volume, which gets immediately to the point by noting, "Remember, you are more than 'man' — you are a Male Man! 'Mankind' includes womankind. 'Man' can mean all human beings, and but our first task is to free the Male Man, who needs liberation far more than Female Man at this moment."

Exhorting his male readers to "be proud you're a Masculist" and to join the "Men's Liberation are for freeing all Mankind, including women — Organization to Uplift and Support Each other (MOUSE)," Mead presents a male manifesto which includes, among other demands, equal work from women, earlier retirement for men, an end to sexually segregated draft laws, and sexual equality for men.

Mead, best known perhaps for his "How To Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," writes pithily and well and as he warms to his subject the material gets hotter and the humor better and better.

Woman Will Be Admiral For First Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy Thursday for the first time in its 197-year history named a woman admiral—Alene B. Duerk, an Ohio native who joined the service 29 years ago.

Capt. Duerk, 52, head of the Navy Nurse Corps, was nominated for promotion to flag rank along with 49 men. The nominations were approved by President Nixon and are subject to Senate confirmation.

The Navy's first admiral joins four other women in the armed forces who have been promoted to star rank in the past two years. The Air Force has two women generals and the Army four, two of whom are now retired.

A native of Defiance, Ohio, Capt. Duerk joined the Navy in 1943 after receiving her nursing diploma from the Toledo, Ohio, Hospital School of Nursing.

During World War II she served in naval hospitals in Portsmouth, Va., and Bethesda, Md., and later was assigned to duty aboard the hospital ship Benevolence, where she cared for the sick and wounded in the final assaults against Japan.

After the war Capt. Duerk was released from the service but remained in the Naval Reserve only to be recalled to active duty in June 1951. She served in various nursing and udministrative posts through the 1960s and was named director of the Navy Nurse Corps in May 1970.

Navy officials said Capt. Duerk was on leave and en route to her mother's home in Holgate, Ohio, at the time her promotion was announced.

I think I must be the only human in the world who's blest with — a husband (I timed him) who takes exactly one half hour to heat a tin of canned soup and put it in a bowl —

a son with some strange disease that's given him lockjaw and made him a mute unless it's a telephone call for him or something is put on the table to eat and then his jaws quiver, pop open and work like crazy til either food or conversation via Alexander Bell is over and snap, closed again —

a second son who has never learned to close his mouth, and is definitely not mute — in fact, he is being treated right now by a doctor for singus nodes which are bumps on the vocal cords due to so much vocal stress, (the cure — silence) - he'll never get well!)

a second dog who's favorite pastime is just plain eating —

a back door that keeps sticking —

a diet I gain weight on —

more errands than time —

more stress than patience —

more bottom than bust (just couldn't resist throwing that in there, it went so well)

more sympathy for myself and I'll end up blotting the paper with tears — ENOUGH!!

One nice thing this week, I'm getting something in the mail besides bills and I do love it. Thanks so much for your cookbook orders — I will get these to you just as soon as they roll off the press, and if you haven't ordered yours do so now because I am only printing so many.

"NEGLECTED MOTHERS"

At home alone in an old rocking chair,
Sits an old mother with silvery hair
hoping and praying day after day
for a letter from children miles away.

Her hands are feeble wrinkled and old
A life of hard work are the story they told
A letter children would make her day bright
Don't neglect longer "do it tonight"

Many years she labored without a fee
darning your socks and bandaged your knee
Pinned your diaper and wiped your nose
tied your shoes and washed your clothes.

Can't you recall the days when she was spry
Making candy and your apple pie
don't you feel the touch up on your borw
Write her you love her and "do it now"

Remember your Mother was your best friend
she will love til life shall end
You are her babies no matter how old
In a worn out body beats a heart of gold.

The Daily Standard:

I like your "Daily Standard" but this weird "Love is" - is in my opinion, absolutely indecent. I have managed to avoid it for weeks and tonight I find it outrageously naked & unclothed & void of all that I find humorous. Right below Ann Landers column - please, please - quit publishing this horrid thing.

Four Eye Putting Bank In Benton

BENTON — A law enacted by the Missouri General Assembly to become effective Aug. 13, will likely allow one of four north Scott county banking institutions to open a facility in Benton within one year.

The Oran State Bank, Bank of Chaffee, Scott City Bank and Trust and the Bank of Illmo have expressed interest in establishing a bank at Benton under the bill which allows the establishment of banking facility within 10 miles of the main facility in the same county.

The law signed by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes permits a bank in a third class county with a population of less than 35,000 to have a facility within 10 miles of the bank in a town of less than 1,550 population and without present banking services. Until this law is effective, the extra facility could only be established in the same city and had to be within 4,000 yards of the main banking house.

All four of the north Scott County banks are pointing to Benton in their plans for the new facility. Benton, the county- seat of Scott County, has a population of 550 and is without a banking facility. All four of the banks claim customers from Benton and the farming area in the center of the county.

John W. Ridgeway, deputy commissioner of finance, in Jefferson City, said that the 10-mile distance is measured "as the crow flies" not by road miles, from the main bank to the city limits of the town where the second facility is planned.

Ridgeway added that the facilities involved in the 10 mile locations established under the new law would be similar to the drive- in, walk- in facilities that are within 4,000 yards of the main facility and regulated under the Missouri statutes.

"The new law permits the main banks to establish almost all services except the closing of loans. The only difference in the facilities located 4,000 yards from the main bank and the others located 10 miles, would be that the 10 mile facility would be able to offer safe deposit boxes if they desired," Ridgeway said.

Earl R. Jarvis, president of the Oran State Bank said early this week that their institution filed an application with the Commissioner of Finance on March 29, 1972 seeking to operate a facility in Benton.

Liston Mitchell, vice president of Bank of Chaffee, stated his board of directors has authorized him to start work on the application immediately. He added that while the application is not filed as yet the Bank of Chaffee will be mailing it in to the state board very soon.

Tom Uelsmann, of the Scott City Bank and Trust, said he was working on his application for the Benton facility this week.

Over at Bank of Illmo, Walter Uelsmann, said his board of directors would also be filing an application for the facility later this spring.

More than 100 applications for such facilities are expected to be received by the State Division of Finance, Ridgeway said. There are already more than 40 on file in the state office and the law is not even effective until mid-August.

There are 93 third class counties with a population of less than 35,000. Scott County's population as listed after the 1970 census is 33,250.

Commissioner of Finance H. Duane Pemberton said the new law is expected to improve banking services for rural areas of the state and to eliminate marginal applications for charters.

There are no counties without a bank in the state, but seven counties have only one bank. There are 11 counties with only two banks and 18 counties with three banks.

Benton lost its bank in about 1932 when the federal government closed financial institutions. It was located in what is now the Moore- Harris Abstract building on Kingshighway.

Deputy Commissioner Ridgeway stated there will be no official action on the applications until House Bill 838 allowing the 10- mile facilities becomes law in August. "We will continue accepting applications, then we have the task of processing the papers and making the field inspections," he added.

He would not speculate on when the town of Benton could expect to see modern banking facilities arrive.

But, from the efforts under way and planned by nearby bankers, a banking facility would seem to be a certainty for the county- seat in the near future.

Approximately 9,000 off-shore oil wells have been sunk in the world's continental shelves.

Butler Trial Comes To Halt

MEMPHIS — The financial dispute arising from a 1959 grain swindle incolving Memphis speculator Landon V. 'Jimmie' Butler came to a temporary standstill in federal court with the prospect of further hearings before the case is decided.

Charles Black, attorney for the Louis Dreyfus Corp., plaintiff in the civil trial, was granted two additional weeks in which to explore financial records of the Butler family.

Black said he needed the time to investigate "questionable" exchanges of money between Butler and his wife, Mrs. Sydney J. Butler.

Granting the delay, United States Dist. Judge Bailey Brown outlined the major premises on which his eventual decision will likely be based.

In a civil suit filed in 1968, Dreyfus, one of the largest grain companies in the world, asked for $650,000 in unpaid damages assessed against Butler Dec. 29, 1959, along with $442,000 in interest which has mounted since the judgment.

However, Butler transferred the deed to the family estate to Mrs. Butler in 1953 and transferred the deed to a $99,000 guest house in 1954. The family bank account is also in her name.

Butler filed for bankruptcy in 1955, claiming he has no personal assets and is, therefore, unable to pay off the 1959 judgment. Mrs. Butler testified during the four- day trial she has loaned her husband about $315,000 over the years, including loans to Reynolds Cotton Co., a family business in which she is the principal stockholder.

Butler said he is the sole employe of the firm, and turns all profits from the business over to Mrs. Butler as partial payment of his debts to her.

Mr. Black said yesterday he feels Reynolds Cotton Co. is simply a conduit through which Butler conducts his own business, using Mrs. Butler's ownership of the firm as an excuse to avoid payment of the 1959 judgment.

In his examination of the family's financial records, Black said he will try to discover the exact amount of money which Mrs. Butler has loaned to her husband and the exact amount now due on the loans.

Judge Brown again indicated he will not allow the New York firm to place a lien on the Butler estate as partial payment for the 13- year- old judgment.

To the Editor:

Mr. Blanton, i have a copy of a letter written by Harold Wayne Ward to his mother when he was away. Since Mother's Day is near we would appreciate it if you could print it in the mailbox section of the Standard. The letter was written with sincere thoughts and express the feeling of many a son or daughter away from home, especially on Mother's Day.

TO MOM

Thu we are far apart, you're still deeply in my heart, and everything I try to do reminds me a little more of how much I love you.

For a mother's love is something that can never be replaced ,and the faults a why I ask forgiveness, Mom, for I'm really ashamed of me.

Harold Wayne Ward
Matthews, Mo.

Thu you do unto others, as you would like to be done unto you. That is what makes a mother's love, so pure & so true.

I'm sorry for all the wrongs I did and the worry I put you through, and I ask forgiveness for these things I didn't mean to do; For every mistake I made I paid in sweat and blood. And it would hurt me deeply if I lost my mother's love.

For you have feelings too, and they hurt just as deep; That's

King Abandons Petition Drive

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. R. J. "Bus King, R-Clayton, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, announced Monday he is abandoning his petition drive to place state reorganization proposals on the ballot.

King took credit, however, for late-hour action by the legislature in sending a compromise proposal for overhauling the executive branch of state government to the voters Sunday night.

The petition drive launched March 13, King said, "has served the purpose for which it was initiated — to get a proposal on the ballot."

"The speed with which this plan was advanced to its present form," he said, "in the closing hours of the 76th General Assembly—after being virtually buried earlier—makes it obvious that the thrust of our petition drive was primarily responsible for yesterday's action."

King said the drive already has netted about 10,000 signatures or about 10 per cent of what would have been needed to place the "Little Hoover" commission recommendation on the ballot.

The original proposal would have abolished 87 boards, agencies and commissions and 440 state programs under 10 major departments.

A substitute plan for 14 big departments, worked out in the Senate, does essentially the same thing. The principal difference is in the autonomy of the state conservation commission, highway department and the University of Missouri. They would be left intact by the plan now going to the voters.

In dropping the petition drive, King announced a new campaign program which he called "Task Force" calling for volunteer executive talent in state government.

It could save up to $100 million in state funds next year, King said.

"This, coupled with a truly efficient operation in Missouri's Department of Revenue, he said, "could enable us to operate without the need for tax increases."

King said he plans to outline this plan in more detail at meetings with businessmen and community leaders in St. Louis and Springfield in the near future.

If elected governor, King said, he would accelerate plans for state government reorganization with powers already at the disposal of the chief executive with legislative cooperation.

Mo-Pac President Downing B. Jenks reports net income was up to $8,543,000 from $6,720,000 for the first quarter period for the railroad and its majority owned subsidiaries.

He said adjusted net income for the period was $5,853,000, or $407,000 for the same period a year earlier.

Operating revenue for the quarter climbed to $152.7 million from $143.8 million

Bond Set For 4 In Stolen Hog Sales

BLOOMFIELD — Bond was set in magistrate court of Stoddard county Thursday by Judge Koss Blomeyer for four persons arrested April 24 in Mississippi County on charges of selling stolen hogs at the Charleston Auction Co. They were released to Stoddard county officials Tuesday after Vernon Johns, Route one, Puxico, identified three of the hogs stolen from his farm April 23.

Bond was set at $2,000 for Ben Wesley Ward, $1,000 for Ruth Ward, $5,000 for Leroy Venable and $1,000 for Katie Venable.

Joe Glen, 58, of St. Louis was bound over to Stoddard county court on charges of forged checks after being arrested April 15 by Charleston police and released the following Sunday by Stoddard county sheriff Edsel Edwards after passing forged money orders in Dexter Feb. 5 to eight businesses.

Joseph Sandridge was ordered by the court to be placed on probation under supervision for a one year period and to pay $13.50 costs on charges of possession of marijuana.

Nixon, Rust, Landgraf Win Praise

DEXTER — Resolutions endorsing President Richard M. Nixon and commending Vernon H. Landgraf and Gary Rust, Republican congressional candidates in 1968 and 1970, respectively, were among highlights of the 10th District GOP convention Saturday afternoon.

The 113 delegates who attended Saturday's meeting endorsed President Nixon's policy of de-escalating the Vietnam war by reducing troops in the war zone from 540,000 to 60,000; commended him on his trip to China "in the interest of world peace," and called for the president's reelection this year.

Landgraf and Rust were commended for their work and help in keeping Southeast Missouri politics alive and healthy. Both opposed Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Cape Girardeau, in their bids for congressional seats.

The delegates chose Mrs. Carrie Maddox of Clarkton as pesidential elector to cast the ballot in the Electoral College.

Raymond H. Vogel, Cape Girardeau attorney who is chairman of the 10th District Republican Committee, proclaimed the call for the convention, Clarence A. Powell was elected chairman of the convention and presided, while Mrs. Sybil Edderer of Doniphan was elected secretary.
